VARILUX COMFORT Seeing is believing.

It's tough to get the right loan.

"You can tell they really that means I know

I'm getting the best loan for me."

IPI/Skyscraper introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI Skyscraper, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house.

Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

At IPI Skyscraper, we hammer out all the details of our One Step construction loans up front — so you don't get hammered by unnecessary fees.

Wamsutta Sheet Sale

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Bob Baugh

Superstar Bob

Sagaponack Resident Completes Starring Role In Second Film, Waits For More

By Dan Rattiner

I am removing Bob Baugh the co-owner of the Sagg Main Store from my celebrity B List and putting him on my A List. He's just completed his second movie in two years and his career is now clearly taking off like a rocket. Another year or two and I expect that I'll see him at the Academy Awards. Actually, the completion of Bob Baugh's work for the upcoming Adam Martin movie On The Run which wrapped for him here in Sagaponack early Friday morning, was the third project he's been involved in.

His career on the screen began four years ago, when he was invited to appear in an LTV rock video called John Spencer's Blues Explosion and Bob was chosen to have a part in it, because he looks exactly like what he is, which is the co-owner of a country store on Eastern Long Island. Bob is about sixty, has a wide smile, even features, a full head of white hair, and, what I'm told is what they call in the business crinkly eyes, which is that his eyes get all crinkly and happy looking when he's in a good mood. He's a hard worker and has a can-do attitude and keeps himself in good trim. He bears a slight resemblance to Leslie Neilson, the comedian who starred in all those Naked Gun movies along with O.J. Simpson. In other words as they say in the business, Bob Baugh was a star waiting to be found for the silver screen.

Baugh's latest project for the Adam Martin movie, was to play the part of the country store a gambler who has an eleven-year-old girl as an accomplice. We have a checkerboard set up on a cracker barrel here in the store as you know, and what they did just after five o'clock, was to bring in all these reflectors and bright lights and cameras and clear off the checkers and bring over four stools for a dice game. A lot of money was changing hands and I played the role of the kindly country storeowner behind the counter about ten feet away putting things in a bag by the register. They must have filmed this scene about forty times before they liked one. The girl at one point, besides giving little signals to the gambler, swipes a candy bar, but I don't see that. That was the idea anyway."

"They must have done this scene forty times before they liked one. The girl at one point... swipes a candy bar, but I don't see that."

owner, in three scenes, shot at the Sagg Main General Store, between 5 p.m. on Thursday, when they close the store down for the day and 2 a.m. the following morning.

"I don't want to give away the plot of the movie," Bob Baugh said, crinkling his eyes when I was in the store this morning buying a jar of Skippy Super Chunk Peanut Butter. "But On the Run involves

In a second scene the camera focuses directly on Bob Baugh, who is busy checking out a lady at the counter. No words are spoken but in the middle of the transaction, both Bob and the lady turn to look at something going on at the checkerboard table, but you never get to see what that is. The third scene in the store shows the little eleven year old picking a card out from the card rack.

Those in the know, the movers, painters, electricians and gossips, say that Jerry Seinfeld's $38 million dollar check has cleared, Billy Joel has packed his last cardboard box of possessions and moved onward to Oyster Bay and now it's time for Seinfeld to move in. The main house of this $40 million dollar oceanfront property in Amagansett has three wings. There is also a separate cottage. We say Jerry should rent one wing to George and the other wing to Elaine. Kramer could live in the cottage and come over from time to time.

The Lloyd Smith's, of San Francisco will be auctioning the contents of their Southampton and Palm Beach homes on May 12. Their Southampton home known as Linden is also for sale, asking price around $25 million.

The Dramatists Guild Awards Gala was held at the Hudson Theater the other evening and many Hamptonites performed. Steven Sondheim did material with Bernadette Peters from their upcoming show, Wiseguys. Elaine Stritch teamed with William Finn to do pieces from their "Royal Family of Broadway." Marvin Hamlisch of Westhampton Beach entertained along with Brian Stokes Mitchell and Maran Mazzie and Lauren Bacall, often of East Hampton, appeared with Dame Edna. "That's all she did," Bob said. "is pick the card out, look at it and walk off camera to the check out, but I was never in that scene."

Bob said On the Run is now in the editing room. He also said On the Run will appear in the Hampton Film Festival this fall, although when I called the Film Festival office they said they hadn't made any decisions about this year yet.

Another movie that Bob was in, made last year, is called, Is That All There Is?

"It was made by Heather Buchanan, the one who wrote and directed Live Nude Women," Bob said. "Her folks have a beach house out here."

Bob described Is That All There Is? as a Thelma and Louise kind of movie and the women are filmed coming down to the store getting sandwiches and then going back out and sitting on the wooden bench out front and eating the sandwich and talking to a fellow who stops by.

"What scenes were you in in that movie?" I asked Bob.

"I was in one where they went inside and got the sandwiches, and I rang them up," Bob said. He seemed very happy and excited about the way his career as a movie actor has taken off, but then he also seems happy and excited about his career as a co-manager of a country store.

"Can I have your autograph?" I asked him as he rang up my Skippy Super Chunk.

"Nah," he replied. "Let me have yours, right here on the bottom. Just put your account number under that."

I expect good things are going to come from Bob Baugh and his new career.

"Call my agent," he said.

"You have an agent?" I said.

"I'll get one," he said. "But then you gotta call him."

Spielberg's Plan To Film New Movie AI On The East End Falls Through

By Dan Rattiner

Two of the East End's most prominent movie directors continue to fail to put together production facilities on the East End. The latest casualty is East Hampton's Steven Spielberg of East Hampton who had planned to lease one of the largest buildings in the area for six months and turn it into a giant movie studio. He was going to pay $200,000 for the use of the building beginning April 26, and when the film (entitled AI) was completed, he would leave behind a sophisticated lighting system worth more than $250,000 so that future filmmakers could use the space as well.

Yesterday was April 26. But just five days before, with many local motels rented long term, executives from Warner Brothers who are making the movie in partnership with Spielberg's Dream Works, called to cancel. An analysis of the cost, they said, showed that it would cost $4 million dollars less to make it in an existing studio in Hollywood.

The script for the film AI, which stands for Artificial Intelligence, was originally optioned by the late Stanley Kubrick twenty years ago. It's the story of artificially intelligent beings trying to take over the world. However, Kubrick never got it into production. And with his passing last year, the project passed on to Spielberg who has cast Jude Law in one of the lead roles. Law starred in The Talented Mr. Ripley last year. The film also highly accurate cost projections which determined that the East End location would be too expensive.

The site involved was to have been in Calverton in the town of Riverhead at a huge former aircraft hanger and manufacturing center known as Building Number Six. It is the largest structure of the former Grumman Aerospace Corporation, where Grumman designed and built the Lunar Excursion Module (LEM) for NASA in the 1960s. In the 1970's and early 1980's, the hanger was one of several used for the manufacturing of the Navy's F14 Grumman Hellcat Fighter Plane, an aircraft that will be familiar to readers because of its use in the Tom Cruise movie Top Gun. More than 600 of these 1500 mile an hour planes were made and although production was stopped in 1991, the aircraft continues to be the mainstay for the United States Navy's Aircraft Carrier Fleet. Since Grumman failed to win the bid for a fighter to replace the F14 though, the Calverton facility, which includes an airfield and other manufacturing plants and laboratories, was closed for good.

More recently, Building Six was the hanger into which the shattered remains of TWA Flight 800, stars Haley Joel Osment, who is best known for his role as the young boy in Sixth Sense. Producing the movie are Kathleen Kennedy and Bonnie Curtis who, together with Mr. Spielberg, produced ET, Jurassic Park and Saving Private Ryan.

Warner Brothers is a much larger film studio than Dream Works and was apparently brought in as a partner because of its considerable resources. Among those resources apparently are the the plane that crashed off Long Island, were taken so that a reconstruction could assist in trying to determine the cause of that crash. The cause was never determined. The reconstruction has since been moved to another, smaller hangar on the Grumman site..

Building Six, the rest of the complex and the airfield today are owned by the Town of Riverhead, which since taking it over from Grumman has thought to make the site into a movie studio. To give you an idea of the space of Building Six, it's clear open space, about thirty-five feet high and about the size of six football fields inside.

In 1998, the Town was in long negotiations with the producers of the Thomas Crown Affair starring Pierce Brosnan but in the end the proposal to use the facility was withdrawn when the union refused to grant permission for workers to perform their duties outside the New York City Metropolitan area.

For Steven Spielberg's AI, however, that obstacle seemed to have been overcome, and just nine days ago, the town felt confident enough to vote unanimously to agree to sign the lease with Mr.

Spielberg. Ninety-two hours later, the deal fell through.

The failure of the Spielberg project in Riverhead follows soon after the closing of the editing studio in Springs, built two years ago by Director Barry Sonnenfeld of Amagansett. Sonnenfeld, whose earlier hits included The Addams Family, Men in Black and Get Shorty, opened this studio and did all his production work for the film Wild Wild West there, just two miles from his home. The movie was a disaster and it was voted by one prominent Hollywood organization as the worst movie made in 1999.

On the other hand, the East End seems to be moving slowly two steps forward, one step back, toward the establishment of a movie industry which will soon obtain a critical mass. May 1, at noon is the official opening of the LTV Movie Studio in Wainscott, the ribbon to be cut by actor Alec Baldwin of Amagansett, who is already in negotiations to make a movie there. The LTV studio will be smaller than the one in Riverhead, but it will have a higher open space inside, rising forty-five feet.

Though the completion of the Wainscott facility was delayed from its planned opening in February, there is great confidence for its success. Several local movie directors have already indicated they intend to use it and at least one project had to be postponed because it had been scheduled to begin in late February.

As for Riverhead, the failure at the last minute of the Spielberg project is a big blow. But they will press on. As Riverhead Supervisor Bob Kozakiewicz has said, the Calverton Enterprise Park as it is known, is just a short helicopter ride away from New York City. It is also a short chopper ride from the homes of Steven Spielberg, Barry Sonnenfeld, Alan Alda and Alec Baldwin for that matter.

Along 3 Blocks

Gas Stations Down 6, Celebrities Up 24, Restaurants Up 11, Coffee Shops Up 3

By Dan Rattiner

There are some very strange trends going on in Bridgehampton. Twenty-five years ago, for example, there were six gas stations on Main Street. This is an amazing number, when you consider we are talking about a main street that is only three blocks long. I remember when they proposed a seventh one. They would tear down the 19th century Bull's Head Inn, a great historic tavern and hotel in the center of town and replace it with a Sunoco "Colonial Style B" station. We here in town decided we had had enough. I wrote an article in Dan's Papers that everybody should mail in one half of their Sunoco credit card to the president of the Sun Oil Company based in Philadelphia. Sunoco backed down, and the Bull's Head Inn survived.

Today there is only one gas station in Bridgehampton, and that is Magretts, tucked in alongside the side of the Kimco shopping center. The Magretts, father and son, have run it for thirty years. There is no stopping them now.

Why have all the gas stations disappeared? I haven't got a clue. Back then there was one right next door to Dan's Papers. Now it's an antique shop. There was one across from Dan's Papers which is now a computer store. There was one right across from where the Candy Kitchen is today, now a florist and children's toy store. There was one in front of the Hopping Real Estate Corporation, now an abandoned building, and there was a gas station directly across the street from them, now a beverage store.

Today in Bridgehampton there are probably twenty-five celebrities on the A List... where before there was just Truman Capote.

This is, as I said, in the space of three blocks. What the heck were they selling in all these gas stations back then?

If gas stations have declined, the number of restaurants has skyrocketed. Back then, if you wanted to go out to eat, you could go either to Bobby Van's which was really a writer's bar, similar to Elaine's in Manhattan, with a very cerebral clientele, or you could go to an Italian restaurant down the street, called Billy's Triple Crown, which was a homage to Carl Yastrzemsiki the Boston Red Sox Hall of Fame baseball player. He had gone to Bridgehampton High School, and Billy DePetris had been a pitcher on the baseball team, while Carl was the catcher. Billy had collected a good deal of memorabilia about Carl and it was on the walls. It was a virtual museum. The spaghetti was an added attraction. And that was it.

Today where there was once a meat market, there is One Ocean Road. Where Billy's Triple Crown was, there is the Bridgehampton Independent. Where Bobby Van's was, there is now World Pie. On School Street, where there had been a private office, there is now 95 School Street. Where there had once been a crafts store, there is the Yama-Q Japanese restaurant. And in a building that didn't even exist back then, there is the new Bobby Van's, which sort of looks like a place Hemingway would have gone to (but never did).

There is also, farther down across from where Magrett's gas station is, an Italian restaurant called

The Pizza Place, and up in the mall, Razzano's Italian restaurant and deli and Seduto's, which features, among other things, Dreesen's doughnuts and Nathan's hot dogs. There is also Kipling's restaurant in a building that has replaced a small potato field and a restaurant currently between ownerships, most recently called The Woodshed. There is also another restaurant between ownerships, last called the Sagaponack General Store Café. Years ago, that was a carriage house.

Bottom line, six gas stations and damn near seven, down to one; what was two restaurants, now up to eleven. Down with gasoline, up with gastronomy.

And there is a further development. The year I moved to Bridgehampton, I remember going into Danny's Luncheonette – it was actually an ice cream parlor with sandwiches – and watching Truman Capote browse through the magazines, ultimately coming up with as I recall, True Confessions. I made a mental note of it. He was the only celebrity in town at the time.

There were two ice cream parlors. The aforementioned Danny's Luncheonette, and the Bridgehampton Candy Kitchen. In either place you could stop off and enjoy something sweet, ice cream or cake, and something cold to drink. Today there is only the Candy Kitchen as far as luncheonettes are concerned and it is an icon, sort of a relic of a former time, something that must be preserved at all costs and probably will be.

But, coming into town, on the attack, like a swarm of bees, killer bees, probably, are the coffee shops. We have a Sedona coffee shop in town now. And a Golden Pear coffee shop and in the next few months, just down the street, we will have a Starbucks, the only Starbucks in the Hamptons, but not the last, you can be sure.

Finally, there are the celebrities. Today in Bridgehampton, there are probably twenty-five celebrities on the A List in the area, where before there was just Truman Capote, and maybe one or two others. These include, Peter Jennings, Alan Alda, Cindy Adams, Ed Burns, Kurt Vonnegut, and Don Hewitt. The list goes on and on.

We've gone from being a gas guzzling, chocolate malted sucking hardly ever eating out local people's community to a coffee drinking, chauffeur-driven-restaurant-addicted-celebrity community. God help us all. •

Ebay

One Misstep At A Virtual Auction And The Internet Police Close In

By Dan Rattiner

The ultimate American dream, I think it's fair to say, is to set up some sort of business that's never been done before, arrange it so that it operates entirely without anyone's help and then walk away from it and collect the money that it spins off. There was the man who invented the flip top can for example and made millions. I once met the man who invented that way of opening the top of a carton of orange juice or milk, simply by pinching it, his name was Bob Abplanab and I met him on his big yacht which he was out in the Hamptons that summer.

What may well turn out to be the most successful of this form of the American Dream may be ebay.com.

Ebay is an auction house which operates on the Internet. People put items up for sale – I think there have been more than a million put up – an auction goes on for about two weeks and the highest bidder gets to have what he wins sent to him. Ebay takes a small cut from both the buyer and the seller and that's how money is made.

At a normal auction house such as Sotheby's and Christie's, you have catalogues, auctioneers, appraisers, caterers, and so forth and so on. As near as I can figure, when you type in ebay.com there isn't a soul from that company interested in hearing from you, nor is there a real ability for you to get to talk to anybody. The whole thing what's said and the buyers can get them too.

In a way the whole thing is like an interactive video game, which as we all know, many people particularly teenagers and children are addicted to. Whether this is a bad thing or not, I don't know. But what this article is about is my being held up to ridicule by someone on ebay who gave me what they call "negative feedback." The comments are there for all to see, and for all I know, millions of people and maybe even you the reader and the entire country is aware of how I slipped up. Meanwhile, the guy who put this business game up is lounging on a beach somewhere counting his money.

...the seller had left a message... "We don't accept negative bidders," meaning Drattiner, and it kicked me off.

is an incredibly closed system, the appraisals are done by the seller, the buyer can send email questions to the seller and learn the seller's history of selling, you can send in comments after an auction about a seller's behavior, and they are listed openly for others to read and the seller can get positive points and even golden stars, depending on what's said, or negative points, depending on

What happened was that I was surfing the Internet one afternoon with nothing to do, when I landed on the ebay site, I was fascinated with it and inside of about fifteen minutes found something that I wanted to buy. I put a bid in on it; it was thirty-six dollars, then forgot all about it. Four days later I got e-mail from ebay congratulating me on winning the auction. There was information in there that I should send a particular person in Utah thirty-six dollars but it wasn't clear to me exactly how that was supposed to happen. They had the item number that I had won, which was in eight figures (like in tens of millions) and they had the seller's made up ebay nickname, which was Kerial. Not knowing quite what to do and being a man of letters, I pressed print, got the e-mail out of my printer and put it on the corner of my desk, or maybe I put it on the shelf above my desk. You got it, I lost it.

What I figured was that after a few days when it was realized I was among the missing, I would be contacted again. I'd apologize, send them a check or pay the money by credit card; it was only thirty-six dollars after all.

About a week later, becoming intrigued about how ebay worked, I went online to see if I could find a particular part I needed for my old Triumph sports car. I found it, an auction was underway and I put a bid in on it of $101.

What I didn't really notice was that next to my name in the bidding the nickname that I had chosen for ebay, which was Drattiner, was now a parenthesis inside of which was a minus one.

The bidding for the sports car proceeded and what I couldn't figure out was why my bid wasn't there. I could see that the highest was at eighty-five dollars, I was bidding $101. And so, I asked my son about it and he said he couldn't understand it either.

"Maybe you haven't bid right, Dad," he said.

It took me almost an hour of struggling through the maze of ebay, with its appraisals and reserve bids and membership applications and rules and regulations to discover that I had received negative feedback from the first seller. There it was, right on the screen.

"Drattiner, didn't pay. Why did you bid?"

I have never had very much in the brains department for computers and the internet, but now having been held up to ridicule by the mob, I learned fast. As for the sports car part, the seller had left a message for at least a dozen other people who had been bidding on it which read, "We don't accept negative bidders," meaning Drattiner, and it kicked me off.

Within half an hour I figured out how to get in touch with the seller of the first item, who lived, from what I could tell by his profile, in a small town in Utah by the name of Nohow or Nowhere. He did have an e-mail address and I wrote him a note and enclosed a credit card number so that he could send me the item. And I asked him if he could please withdraw his negative feedback.

He responded within an hour. Of course he would and the next day there was another note on my ebay resume that read, "Transaction completed. I would recommend this buyer anytime."

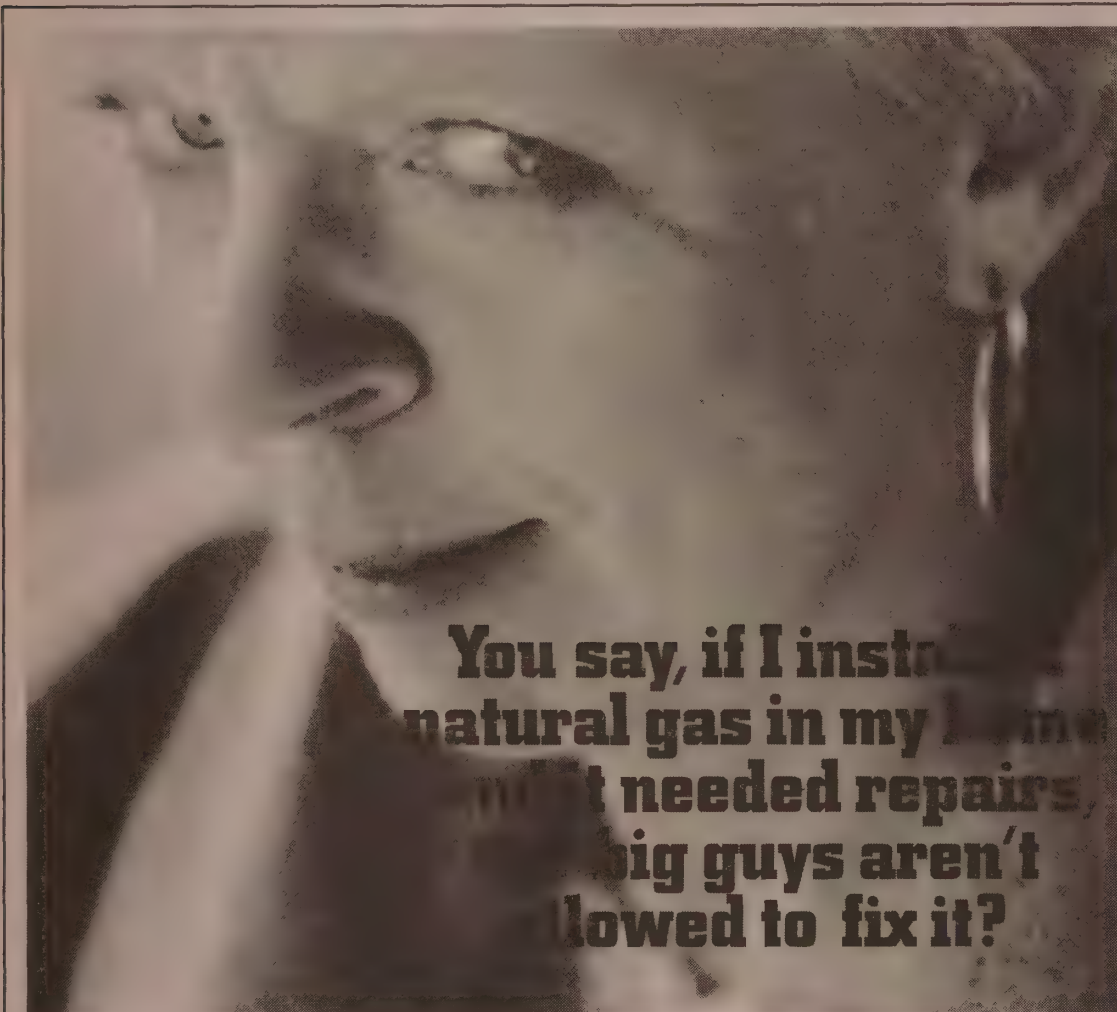

But the minus one had not gone away and my Utah seller's comment had been simply put under it as sort of a follow up. I tried contacting ebay and in the course of things found out that there was no way I could straighten this out other than having to go to another auction and perform dutifully, which would restore me to zero (0). I didn't necessarily want to do this, however.

And so, here I am today writing this a week later. I am still minus one as far as ebay is concerned and I can't get rid of this lousy feeling.

"Cancel your account," my son said at dinner. "And go on it with another name."

I have thought about this. Rattiner is an odd name. I figure people will either know who I am, or my various friends and relatives many of whom live in California where ebay is located will know exactly what kind of relative they've got here.

If I can get to the beach where this ebay guy is, though, I'm gonna kill him. •

Hi There Earth

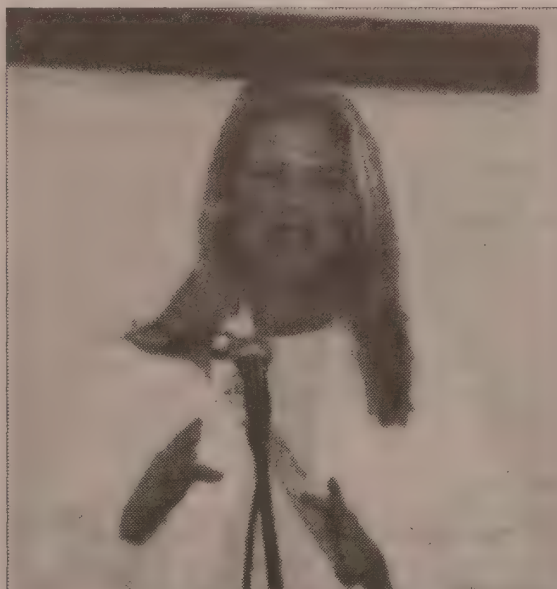

Christie Brinkley Kicks Off Big East Hampton Fair On The Earth's Day

By Janna Cord

On a gray April afternoon, Hamptonites celebrated the 30th anniversary of Earth Day in East Hampton last Saturday. As Mother Nature dumped nearly two inches of rain on Long Island the night before, and threatened more of the same on Saturday, the event was moved from Herrick Park inside to the East Hampton Middle School gymnasium.

An African Drum performance kicked things off, followed by a short speech by model, mother, activist and Bridgehamptonite Christie Brinkley. As a member of the STAR Foundation for the past two years, Brinkley was there to lend her name to the Millstone Reactor issue. She urged Hamptonites to get involved in fighting for the shut down of the reactor. Although situated on the Long Island Sound in Waterford, Connecticut, Brinkley has come to learn that Millstone is definitely Long Island's problem. Federal nuclear energy regulation stipulates that anyone living outside a ten mile radius of a nuclear reactor should not be in immediate danger in the direct aftermath of a nuclear accident. Areas beyond the ten mile radius should have ample time to evacuate to safety. The East End of Long Island sits just eleven miles from the Millstone Reactor. In fact a Congressional Subcommittee confirmed STAR's

worst fears when they concluded that an accident at Millstone would devastate areas in at least a twenty mile radius.

With this in mind, the East End of Long Island will be in a very precarious position as there is neither an easy nor quick escape route. As our children grow up a dozen or so miles from potential disaster, parents like Brinkley have to ask, what can we do? Daunting enough is the prospect of knowing an operational nuclear power plant exists in your backyard, worse yet Millstone's safety record paints a far grimmer picture.

Apparently, "Millstone has released more radioactivity into the air and water than any US commercial reactor," claims STAR's newsletter. In fact, according to Brinkley, Millstone pled guilty to twenty-five counts of pollution in 1999 alone, and paid a fine of $10 million. Bob Alvarez, formerly the Senior policy advisor to Bill Richardson and Department of Energy employee who is now the executive director for the STAR Foundation, claims that "Millstone has had more whistleblowers than any other nuclear reactor in the United States."

Furthermore, he relates, the staff is apparently appalled at safety conditions and grossly under trained. In 1996 the reactor was shut down for ignoring safety regulations. Brinkley added that Millstone is actually up for sale and that the two highest bidders are foreign interests.

"If these American owners care so little about the effect they have on the local environment, what are these foreigners going to care?" asked Brinkley. Her goal this summer is education. She feels the local people have been very responsive in the call to action, but the weekenders still need some help. To that end STAR is planning some fundraising/awareness raising events this summer. The first will be a master class performance by ex-East Hampton resident Billy Joel consisting of an intimate evening with the artist and his piano. Scheduled to take place at a local venue, he will sing, take questions from the audience and perform requests.

Additionally, the fair consisted of twenty or so booths representing a varying spectrum of environmental causes. From Eco-friendly gardening to vegetarianism, many groups came out to celebrate and advocate. The Group for the South Fork was handing out handbooks for toxic free living on the East End called "Healthy Households." The orga-

Oceans and Beaches." Tips included "Get your mind out of the gutter," a plea for all of us to use garbage cans instead of gutters when disposing of our refuse and "Oils well that ends well," a reminder to recycle motor oil instead of dumping it into a storm drain. There was a group from PETA (The People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) promoting a vegetarian lifestyle as well as the coalition to save the Piping Plover in the Hamptons, just to name a few.

Although the East Hampton Middle School gymnasium may not have been the most bucolic setting for an Earth Day celebration, the change in venue didn't seem to dampen the spirits of the celebrants. A local band played with verve while the children danced. Although the sidewalk chalk drawing event for the kids turned into the chalk drawing on the gym floor event, you couldn't see any diminished enthusiasm from the participants. And, as there is no fooling Mother Nature, by the close of the festivities it hadn't rained a single drop. ●

Strange Question

Why Was The Land Sold Out From Under The Shinnecocks Sold So Cheap?

By Chris Stanley

"The Earth does not belong to us. We belong to the Earth." ...Chief Seattle.

April 2000: State Supreme Court Justice gives Parrish Pond developers the go ahead to bulldoze Shinnecock sacred burial grounds.

Historic Background:

For centuries, the land on the east end of Long Island, from Quogue to Montauk, was under the stewardship of Native American Nations. As an open space preserve, it was owned by no one, and as such, the territory was an undisturbed sanctuary for wild life and humanity.

A major transformation occurred, in 1859 when New York State legislature portioned off 2,800 acres of the Shinnecock Reservation, reducing it from 3,600 acres to a mere 750 acres in Shinnecock Hills and 50 acres in Hampton Bays.

For the members of the Shinnecock Indian Nation, this was the dramatic beginning of a "Trail of Tears," marking a trend which would inevitably lead to the extinction of the Native American way of life.

Developers entered what the Shinnecock tribe revered as "sacred" land, desecrated ancient burial grounds, displaced wild life from its natural habitat, and pushed the tribe into a tighter and much narrower boundary.

Before the end of the 20th Century, the Shinnecock Nation was again threatened with a dramatic reduction of its natural habitat when Parrish Pond Associates purchased 62 acres of this open space in 1996 for approximately $20,000 per acre. The previous owners of the parcels: Lildom Estates; Mary Beras; and the Estate of J. Vincent Early, sold their portions of the land for a total of less than a million dollars (a fraction of the true land value). Why?

Then the white men came and the land began to be bought and sold. As part of a natural habitat of an indigenous people, whose ancestors date back as far as 10,000 years, these 62 acres of land are said to be an archaeological rarity, replete with Native American relics.

Gaynell Stone, Ph.D., Director of the Museum of the Suffolk County Archaeological Association, was quoted as having said that: "The Parrish Pond parcel is, because of its archaeological and historic value, eminently eligible for the National Register of Historic places."

Hermon Bishop, representing the Shinnecock Nation in their court actions against the developers, Parrish Pond Associates and the Town of Southampton, stated that "The parcel is forty-seven percent maritime heathland, and a type of land that is almost nonexistent in New York State, and should be preserved". Mr. Bishop also stated that the required archaeological evaluation had been done by an archaeologist working for the developer, and that it was not only biased and inept, but "clearly showed a conflict of interest".

Ruling based on one-sided technicalities?:

Last week, State Supreme Court Justice James A. Gowan denied the Shinnecock Nation's lawsuit against developers, Parrish Pond Associates. Judge Gowan's decision was based on the technicality that the tribe had neglected to file their application for a preliminary injunction within the required thirty day statute of limitation.

Assemblyman Fred Thiele, representing the Shinnecock Nation, argued that the Planning Board had "failed to give the tribe proper notice" and that "in the past, the Shinnecocks had relied Judge's decision process.

Although Justice Gowan wrote in his decision, that the Southampton Town Planning Board had not complied with the requirements of the State Environmental review, and had also failed to take a "hard look" at the ecological and archaeological issues involved, he still gave the go ahead to resume the bulldozing of the land without further archaeological review.

Why would the preservation or desecration of this historically rich land depend on the appraisal of a novice archaeologist, hired by the developer, rather than the findings of the most prominent archeologist in New York State Robert Kuhn, Ph.D.?

Dr. Kuhn is reported to have written extensively on the relics and artifacts which had been found in the ancient burial grounds that Justice Gowan had given permission to plow under.

According to Ruben Bess Valdez, "The state did studies on the archaeological heritage of the Shinnecock Hills that filled volumes with evidence of human life on the land. Our ancestors are buried all over these hills. Workmen found evidence of wampum making during excavation."

Ruben Valdez, a member of the Shinnecock Indian Nation Land Defense, said that: "During the five-day protest this past winter, I personally went to a State Trooper at the site of the bulldozing and asked if he would allow a native religious group to spend a few minutes to consecrate the land that our ancestors were being desecrated on. I told the State Troopers that if they would allow the religious event we would only take a few minutes to apologize to our ancestors for allowing their remains to be uprooted and we would all go home. The State Troopers would not allow us even a brief ceremony."

Mr. Valdez further stated that a few days later, when he had presented the State Troopers with a legal document calling for a temporary moratorium on the bulldozing, "Troopers insisted on ignoring the injunction and allowed the bulldozing of our sacred land to continue until the very last minute of the work day."

When so many other technicalities have been trespassed, one may ask why a judge would base his ruling on only one.

The Money Factor:

One may ask, how were the developers able to acquire sixty-two acres of prime land in the Hamptons for such a small sum as approximately $20,000 per acre? And just how much profit will they be seeking to make on the development of the 38 parcel subdivision? And exactly what will be the process of maximizing their profit?

upon the fact that the town would give them notice".

Attorneys for the Parrish Pond Associates counter-argued that the developers had posted signs on the property and that they had published a legal notice about the public hearing on the subdivision application.

Members of the tribe believe that the Southampton Town Planning Board had deliberately chosen not to notify them, as was required by town policy.

Attorneys for the Shinnecock Nation contend that as a "quasi-government entity," the tribe is entitled to special consideration by the state and the town.

By extension, logically, this special status should have entitled the Shinnecock tribe to a direct notification from the Town Planning Board, especially when the proposed subdivision was to have such a direct impact on the tribe.

It is commonly known that Shinnecock elders have used the sixty-two acres as training grounds for young Braves, and that they had not seen any significant changes taking place on the land until just before the actual bulldozing had begun.

One may also raise the question of the role archaeological sensitivity could have played in the review: flamenco vivo

By Marion Wolberg Weiss

In an attempt to bring more cultural diversity to the Hamptons, Guild Hall has hit the nail squarely on the head with last weekend's performance by the Spanish dance company, Flamenco Vivo. While dance as an art form generally doesn't get much exposure here, the emphasis on ethnic dancing is particularly pleasing.

Flamenco dancing is relevant for other reasons — mainly because it has diverse cultural origins/influences itself: the focus on articulation of the feet, for example, can be seen in Irish step and clog dancing (the latter form popular where Country and Western music reigns, including the region where this writer grew up). Flamenco music, as a separate yet related art, also seems similar to Country and Western music with its subjects of love, loyalty, betrayal — and passion.

However, both flamenco music and dancing are also unique to Spanish culture, a tradition that emphasizes passion where the need for emotional relief through movement has always been a driving force. The word, "flamenco," itself refers to the gypsies who live in Seville and may derive from the Flemish people whose name means to "fleme" or banish. It's easy to see how such a denotation could also be applied to the carefree, involved—even the floor itself plays an essential part.

The Flamenco Vivo dance troupe did an admirable, succinct job of articulating similar historical facts as well as articulating the art/craft of the flamenco, including use of castanets, clapping, and footwork. Thus, alternating explanations, followed by a dance performance, became a perfect combination for the Kidfest audience (and for the adults, too). This approach kept the youngsters' attention while also proving that teaching techniques that employ "tell and show" are usually effective.

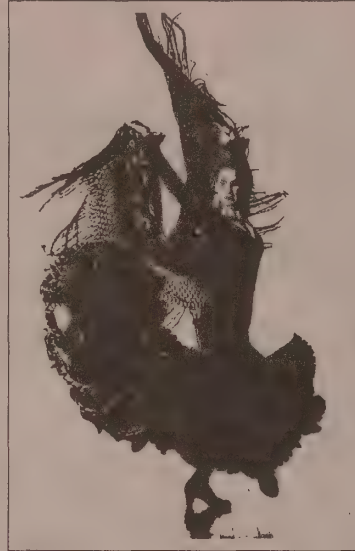

The performance aspect demonstrated that Spanish dancing, although unique, is a blend of Eastern and Western dance with a large amount of sexuality added. Yet, it is not dancing with the feet alone; the entire body (particularly the face, shoulders and hands) is involved—even the floor itself plays an essential part.

Most fascinating, however, is the interaction between the individual dancer, the rest of the troupe and the audience. By dancing so passionately, the dancer enables everyone to feel the experience vicariously. But this passion, even sexuality, never appears indecent. As one dance critic has said, "Flamenco dance restores the lost innocence to the natural expressiveness of the human body."

While some American forms have relied on sexuality, like disco dancing, flamenco's symbiotic relationship between the dancers and the audience can never be replicated, it seems to this writer. Anyone who has ever experienced flamenco dancing in its natural habitat (or even at Guild Hall) can attest to that.

The Sheltered Islander by Sally Flynn

Observations of a New Islander #103 Summer Cramp

Memorial Day fast approacheth... and the migration of the D.I.P.'s will begin.

As Shelter Island increases its appeal as a summer vacation spot, people are able to demand, and get, higher and higher amounts for renting their homes for the summer season from Memorial Day to Labor Day.

While it gives Islanders a financial boost, it creates D.I.P.'s, Displaced Island People, people who are forced out of their winter rental because they can't afford the dramatic increase in price for the same damn house in the summer. I was "dipped" twice in the past three years. My last rental was $900 a month in winter and $5000 a month in summer. I camped out at my mother's for two consecutive summers while I burned one dollar bills at the altar of the Year Round Rental.

No one can blame anyone for getting $5000 a month for a simple home whenever they can, but it certainly creates a lot of problems. Many D.I.P.s have to move off Island, if they can't find something. Many are forced to camp out with friends and/or relatives until the prices fall back to normal. Relatives of D.I.P.s hide out when Memorial Day comes, because they know the D.I.P.s are looking for them... Friends and relatives even try D.I.P. rotation, like crop rotation, the D.I.P.s get planted with a different relative each season.

My solution is simple. The school isn't in use during the summer. Why not rent out classrooms as studio apartments? The school could use the revenue.

There's a cafeteria. The short people can be housed in the Elementary section where the commodes are only six inches off the floor. There's a library and nice auditorium to show movies...

And if the school fills up, set up a tent city in the schoolyard. Set up a nice row of hibachi's and several of those attractive bright blue portable outhouses and VOILA! Chez Oh Vey! Hey, C'mon... its just for the summer...

The wonderful Rev. Steven Crowson, at St. Mary's Episcopal Church has taken up the cause of D.I.P.s and others who can't get a lock on affordable year round housing here on Shelter Island. If you're on Shelter Island and about to be aced out of your rental because of summer prices, please call Rev. Crowson, he is collecting data. And don't forget to thank him for his efforts. He shared that one of the pastors there, prior to his tenure, was "dipped" every summer that he ministered.

Of course, there is a contingent on Shelter Island who would be thrilled if all the working people left the Island at 5 p.m. and came back the next morning at 9 a.m. to do their gardening and clean their houses. I can say anything I want about them because they'd never read this column. Of course, they might read this column if I had any celebrity names to mention, or if I knew the fancy wine of the month you must try... the only celebrity I know is the brilliant sculptor Hap Bowditch, and the only whine I know is, "Mom, can I puh-leeze have a sleep-over?"

It seems like you have to do your time as a D.I.P. before you can find year round housing. I think all the realtors conspire and whomever has called them the most over a two year span, gets the next available year-round rental. When I was a D.I.P., I had all the realtors on speed dial.

So, if you're a D.I.P., take heart. Affordable year round rentals do happen. Just be ready with the checkbook. In the words of General Hannibal Hamlin during the Civil War, when asked his strategy for victory, he replied "Well, ya got ta git thar furtest wit the mostest men..."

years ago in dan's papers

TWENTY YEARS AGO

"Census Department Takes On The East Hampton Post Office"
"APRIL 25, 1980"

I really was looking forward to the Census. During March, there were commercials on television and radio exhorting me, along with all my fellow citizens, to fill in the Census form and send it back when it came on the first of April.

STAND UP AND BE COUNTED, the commercials said. Your form will arrive April first. How much money the county could get from the Federal government seemed to depend upon how many people were living in our area. I would not only be doing something for my country, I would be doing something in getting services back for my tax dollars by standing up and being counted.

But then I heard something very disturbing on one of the TV commercials.

"Be sure to watch your mailbox," the TV announcer said. "Your census form will be delivered to you by the postal service to mailbox."

Apparently, they were unfamiliar with the East Hampton Post Office and the running battle I am having with them to get my mail.

Sure enough, the big day came on April first and I did not receive my census form in my mailbox. I checked the mailbox on the second then again on the third, and still there was nothing. Maybe tomorrow, I thought.

My house on Three Mile Harbor Road (or Three Mile Harbor Hog Creek Road as the post office insists it be called) is located on a steep hillside. From the picture window of my kitchen I can look down and see the street where once a day the blue and white mailtruck rumbles by.

On the fourth of April, about four o'clock in the afternoon, the mail truck came to my mailbox, stopped, and then drove off up the street.

The Census, I thought. But when I went out to the mailbox to look, I found nothing. What could I make of that?

As the days rolled by, I felt more and more that I had become a non-person in the United States of America. All around me people were filling in their census forms. On television, announcers were exhorting people to get their forms in the mail in the next few days at the latest. Meanwhile, I had received nothing. I had no idea whom to call. The U.S. Census was not in the telephone book.

I called the Epsteins, who live up the street. "Did you get your Census forms?"

"Sure."

What was the post office truck doing at my mailbox? Were they checking to make sure that nothing was being left off?

A sympathetic friend agreed to show me her census form. It asked for your age, your sex, your nationality, and some information about your house.

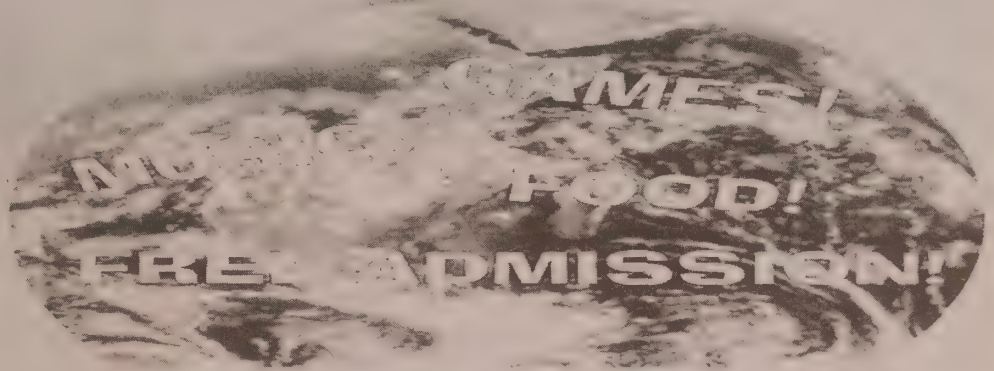

"Maybe there's a REASON they don't send you a Census form," my friend volunteered.

"I don't know what it could be," I said. "I've lived here in this house three years. I light the house

Easter Sunday was confusing. The phone started ringing early. A sculptor needed to come re-install her work. My dear friend who works as my carpenter/painter was already hard at work when I arrived and it seemed a day like any other.

A friend invited me to lunch, all too aware that I find it hard to interrupt work with something so silly as needing to eat. He had made a main course but suggested that the meal would be helped by the addition of a small salad. "No problem!" I said. "I'll just head over to the country market and pick up some greens." What a difference a block makes. I had no problem coming out of the driveway onto Montauk Highway. Traffic was almost non-existent. I headed to the market and was surprised to find it closed. I don't understand how I can be so unaware of my surroundings and national holidays. Obviously when you run a business in a tourist community. You work on most holidays. There is increased traffic.

I have a limited number of days until we reopen on May sixth. Our annual "Meet the Writers Book Fair" will occur on the evening of May fifth. So, back to my point. Cinco de Mayo otherwise known as May fifth is a national holiday in Mexico. No one will notice here but almost all businesses will be closed in Mexico.

On Sunday, my frustration did not end at Schmidt's Country Market. I headed on to King Kullen. The market was closed. The parking lot was empty. I went to Razzano's. It was closed. I headed back up Main Street. The Golden Pear was closed. I remembered Dan's story from the Christmas issue. The surf shop in East Hampton opened for him on Christmas morning because a garbage bag full of gifts got thrown out with the garbage bags containing garbage. No one was available to open anything for me. The cupboard was bare. I had been out of town all week. There was no solution. I arrived empty handed.

On Sunday night the new Thai restaurant in Sag Harbor was open. The Japanese restaurant across the street was not. I think they have the same owners. The Easter bunny has to make difficult decisions about where to leave the Easter baskets and all the Easter eggs. How did the rabbit get to be the symbol for Easter anyway? Easter is a religious holiday. Certainly there were many non-Christians who chose not to work on Easter. This is a time when family and friends gather to break bread and enjoy a feeling of communion. I simply can't figure out who worked, who didn't and why.

By the way, no one closed the beach!

up at night. I'm right on the road."

"Maybe the United States doesn't WANT you."

On the front of my friend's Census form I saw a phone number.

FOR HELP CALL 369-4919.

I wrote the number down and put it in my wallet.

Two days later, still without a Census form, I called.

"Hello, this is Dan Rattiner."

"Who?" a lady said.

"Rattiner. Dan Rattiner."

"Raffiner?"

They were trying to get rid of me. Carefully. I spelled my name and explained the nature of my problem. The form, I was assured, had indeed been mailed, and the problem had undoubtedly been with delivery. Was my post office box hard to get to?

"The problem is with the address," I explained. "I live on a street commonly called Three Mile Harbor Road. But if you send mail to that address it usually doesn't get there, The street actually goes by another name according to the post office."

"What is that?"

"Do you have a pencil and paper with lots of room?"

The Census lady wrote down Three Mile Harbor Hog Creek Road and assured me that a second Census would be mailed with the proper address.

"I probably won't get that either," I said.

"Why not?"

"I just won't."

"Then we'll hand deliver it," the lady said. "Give me exact directions on how a Census Enumerator can locate your house."

I explained the directions to my house and the Census lady assured me that within two or three days a Census Enumerator would deliver by hand my Census form to my mailboxes.

"Good luck," I said.

Three more days go by. Newsday ran a headline LONG ISLAND LOSING POPULATION. I knew why. On the fourth day, I am sitting by the picture window in the kitchen thinking about the interesting way I am forced to sign those forms for charges on my credit card.

"Just fill in your address and phone number," the waitress or the saleslady says.

But there is no room. I write 26 3 Mi. Hrbr. Hg. Crk. Rd. E.H. N.Y. 11937. 516 324-6665. That fits.

A blue and white mail truck pulls up to my mailbox below. The driver does something to the mailbox, waits, and then drives off up the street. I run down, but there is nothing.

Three days later, after one more call to the Census lady, my form arrives in my mailbox. Quickly, before a mail truck can drive up, I take it out of the mailbox and bring it up to my kitchen table. It is a big form, and it has a letter inside.

"We must, from time to time, take stock of ourselves as a people," the letter says "if our nation is to meet successfully the many national and local challenges we face."

One of those challenges, I thought, was getting my form past the determined opposition of the East Hampton Post Office. In that, I thought, the Bureau of the Census, together with an assist from a private citizen, had finally succeeded.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival

(featuring films that either takes place in the Hamptons or were filmed here)

April 29th ~ Masquerade

A taunting romantic suspense thriller of an ambiguous young man's ambitions and the wealthy wife he might have married for her dowry. Beautiful people and likewise beautiful, close-by locations, highlight the dark plot.

Short: Nice

May 6th ~ Amistad

Based on a true story, the movie chronicles the incredible journey of a group of enslaved Africans who are trying to get back to their beloved homeland. They take over the Amistad which gets seized by US authorities off Montauk and brought to Connecticut where they are charged with murder & imprisoned to await their fate. A very emotional movie and well acted.

Short: Shoto-Kan Karate-do

May 13th ~ The Dain Curse

Fittingly adapted from an early Dashielle Hammett novel, this well produced, film version is crammed full with the smoking-gun intrigue of The Maltese Falcon author.

Short: 1994 Artists Writers Game (Encore)

May 20th ~ Grey Gardens

This somewhat shocking documentary actually remains compellingly poetic and touching. It captures a small portion of the later years of Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie (aunt and cousin of Jacqueline Onassis), filmed in their decaying, over grown mansion in East Hampton. Once seen, Edith and Edie, will not soon leave you.

Africa On Broadway

The World Premiere of Columbia Pictures I Dreamed of Africa, starring Amagansett's own Kim Basinger, took place this week at Sony's Lincoln Square on Broadway in New York City. The premiere had all the Hollywood glitz, including screaming crowds crying out for stars and other notables to come over and sign autographs, and a long line of TV crews, including my crew and me (I shot this for a TV segment). The film is based on a true story of Kuki Gallman who went to live in Kenya and still does. It had all the hardships one would expect of a pioneer family, although no covered wagons. Kim is excellent in the film showing that LA Confidential was not a one night Oscar stand. The event had lots of celebrities, although one might have thought that the film was Swiss Family Trump as there were Trumps in all directions, although mostly pointed at the cameras. The post-film party was at Tavern On The Green.

"THE GREAT GARDEN GIVEAWAY"

Shorelines...With Mary Foster

I was cleaning out my mother's attic and came across a poem I had written when I was eight or nine. It relates the story of one of my Lake Erie beach walks, and finding a gull struggling against death, its wings rendered useless from an oil spill. Nothing new. Lake Erie was polluted when I was growing up there. A once thriving fishing industry was virtually dead.

My Long Island grandparents were of the generation of East Hamptons who saw things change radically. In their lifetime, living in one of the oldest farm regions in New York State, they saw farms drop from 2.8 million acres (1935) to 50,000 acres (1980 – its now down to 32,000.) And fishing. Everyone seemed to be involved in fishing in some way back then. Yes, the landscape was visually changing. Before the hurricane of '38, my mother remembers you could see the ocean from almost anywhere in East Hampton. Before the "walls" of phragmites grew, and the housing crop sprouted.

It's true, from their generation into the 1970s, wetlands were considered wastelands, places to fill in rather than to protect. And we saw the effects of that lack of knowledge. The valuable ecological communities that wetlands are, when destroyed, nearly destroyed our wildlife and our waters. What filters out contaminates before they reach our waters, what absorbs property-ruining floods, what provides breeding nurseries for important plants and fish, what provides a growth haven for certain plants important in the marine food chain, science now tell us, are wetlands.

Why is it so important to teach our children marine science, I asked Chris Smith, head of the Cornell Marine Program and its forty plus marine scientists and educators. Why, in fact, is the Cornell Marine program expanding its marine science in-school offerings, its "science camps" at Suffolk County Marine Environmental Learning Center at Cedar Beach in Southold, and launching two new major educational initiatives – one with Riverhead's Atlantis Marine World and one with Centerport's Vanderbilt Museum?

Why is it important for our children to learn about Long Island's marine environment?

A marine scientist himself, and avid sailor, Chris replied thoughtfully. First, Long Island is unique, he said. The glacier that formed us stopped here. Here, not New Jersey, not Maine. Two glaciers, in fact. The first one (the Illinoian glacier 150,000 years ago) deposited the south fork's dunes and beaches. The second (the Wisconsin 22,000 years ago), receded north, created hills, and scraped out and filled Long Island Sound.

What's more, this glacial moraine that we live on, was deposited out into the Atlantic just where the tropical-river-in-the-water known as the Gulf Stream turns eastward and out to sea. Which is one of the reasons Long Island is a "crossroads" of sorts. Northern species of fish come here as do southern. We are the southern most range of northern species, such as cod. And the northern most range of southern species such as red snapper. (This is paralleled on land. Our proximity to the Gulf Stream is also one of the reasons why the region's growing season is twenty to thirty days longer elsewhere in the state. Our island is a crossroads for land plants and animals, as well. And this explains why Suffolk County continues to lead the state in both agriculture and in fishing.)

And, by the way, our unique geographic location – extending out into the Atlantic – puts us smack in the path of many migrating birds that follow the coastline.

When we teach our young Long Islander's about the uniqueness of their island's marine environment, we are also preparing them for stewardship of this precious resource. As they become aware of Long Island's singular ecology, and the balance of nature, environmental considerations will become part of their life decisions. (Eg- Do I garden with non-native plants and fertilize my lawn thus adding to our water pollution, or do I practice sound gardening techniques such as selecting native plants species that require less water and fewer – or no – chemical applications?)

Just as we have seen changes in our lifetime, so they will. World population is expected jump a third in the next fifty years (from 6 billion to 9 billion.). Just as we have learned how important a healthy marine environment – clean water – is to us when we thought we'd always see clean water here, so do our young people need to learn.

Just as our generation has learned how our economy is our environment – farming, fishing, our rural landscape – so do they need to learn.

A healthy marine environment goes straight to the heart of quality of life issues. What about being able to go fishing? What about our shellfish harbors closing?

And beyond "quality of life" what about our "pride of place"? There was a time here, only 150 years ago, when Long Islanders owed their livelihood to the sea. Half of Long Island's economic activity was tied to maritime activities (whaling, fishing, and shipbuilding). We have a unique heritage. And we have families who continue to carry on those traditions that are important to us.

Then there is something Chris called "strength of character" that he feels developed for so many of us, in moments on the water. A test of the individual in nature... likes the time when you were tumbled by the undertow, and survived.

Why, finally, why teach our kids about Long Island's unique ecology? Well, like our rain forests, the marine environment is mysterious, fragile, intricate, and can be destroyed. Like our rain forests, it may hold the key to important cures – science is now looking at the horseshoe crab as having a possible key to the cure for cancer. And don't we all need to spend time in nature, to link with the natural world we share with others? Why, indeed.

Shop'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

Would you believe May is here already? I just checked the calendar, yep; May 1 is next week. With this crazy cool weather and lots of rain, you could have fooled me; the weather never stopped me from doing what I love to do and what I really do best! So let's go shopping!

On Jobs Lane in Southampton, you can sizzle into the summer at Little Lucy's, the brand new shop located across the street from the monument and park, that is opening on May 1. Sizzle with vibrant colored beach bags, straw hats and visors, exotic sarongs and exotic shawls, beaded evening bags, sexy sandals and thongs. The embroidered dog pillows, glass cases and purses are unique and affordable. Look for a large selection of jewelry in all the newest styles like toe rings, ankle bracelets, and more at unbeatable prices. This little shop is stocked with copper candleholders for out door living; they hang on a long rod and hold the tea lights. Also tabletop candleholders, food covers that are decorated with that popular dragonfly and lady bug motif. Patricia the owner invites everyone to join her on opening day, May 1. This is a must see shop, trust me.

Little Lucy, Southampton

Hot off the press, this season Sinenberg Prestige Shows with the fifth Annual Hamptons Sagaponack Antiques Show and Sale coming on its new date, Saturday, May 6 to beautiful Sagaponack's famous landmark restaurant, Old Stove Pub on Montauk Highway.

This wonderful antique show and sale will be held outdoors, under tents, rain or shine, packed with prestigious antique dealers from all over the United States. There will be wonderful furniture from France, garden antique furniture and architectural, decorative furnishings and accessories, lamps, light, fabrics, and more. Mark your calendar for this one!

Do you like yard sales? At the Elaine Benson Gallery on Main Street in Bridgehampton look for a giant yard sale this Saturday, April 29. Kimberly, Elaine's daughter is selling off her famous mom's books, memorabilia, household items and more. Stop by, you might just find that hidden treasure that you have been looking for.

Second Nature Market of East Hampton is announcing the opening of the new Southampton location just across the street at 70 Main Street in the village. Just for the record, Second Nature Markets have been a Hampton's landmark for thirty years. This new location will include a "Juice Bar", featuring protein shakes, wheat grass, citrus and herbal shots and all of the current lines will be expanded and many new products will be available. Hey, me give up Ravioli? Maybe!

Another grand opening in East Hampton... At 58B Park Place, Gems of the Past will open its doors on Saturday, April 29, and those doors lead to bright pink walls that are complimented by a Victorian floral border and dark wood and glass, 1920's jewelry and display cabinets. It is certainly a look not soon forgotten. Gems of the Past is a very unique jewelry store featuring one of a kind and unusual antique, estate and fine new jewelry. The owner Karen Adler, is a graduate gemologist and she is able to determine and purchase gemstone pieces. She does personal jewelry shopping and will find that one special item for you. Along with the beautiful jewelry, you will find unusual antique and estate dresser items such as crystal perfume bottles, small boxes and powder jars. These make the perfect hostess gift, and you may find yourself returning just to buy another for yourself. A little difficult to find, it's only a few steps from either Street (enter the alleyway by the ice cream store) or the main parking lot...

Time to call it a day, looks like the sun might just come out, so while I can, I should do some planting. Hope I don't get caught in a sudden rain storm.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

One may also ask, how much more will the Town of Southampton be receiving in revenues from the various ways the subdivision may be used in the taxable future? One may further ask whether any portion of the historic land can be preserved through the efforts of conservationists to buy it back...and at what price?

How will the loss of privacy and the increased pressures on the environment affect the long-time owners of the neighboring properties? How will developmental change in their environment affect the value of their homes?

According to Ruben Bess Valdez, "There is no unity among the homeowners. Many of them feel that they can always move away. Some may relocate to the North Fork... and then what?"

Mr. Nadal, a long-time resident homeowner on Little Neck Road, expressed his sentiments: "I don't want to see this land developed because it will bring in more traffic congestion and ground water problems to our rural neighborhood."

A homeowner residing near the college, who requested to not be identified said: "I'm ashamed to admit we're intimidated by the police. They're like a Gestapo here. We're letting the Shinnecocks do the fighting, and frankly, I don't think they stand a chance. When they lose, we will all suffer the consequences of an unhealthy and stressed environment."

A Possible Solution:

The Parrish Pond parcel is on a qualified list of properties to be preserved through the 2% Community Preservation Fund. Supervisor Vincent J. Cannusio has appealed to the town of Southampton to have the sixty-two acre appraised for possible repurchase.

The Southampton Town Board has put in an order for an appraisal. Professor Robert Zellner, Co-Chairman of the Anti-Bias Task Force, is currently making efforts to negotiate a settlement. In a phone interview, early this week, he said: "Southampton town says they don't have a willing seller at this point. I would like to appeal to everyone to contact Supervisor Cannusio and Parrish Pond Associates to plead with them to reach an agreement that will preserve the land."

A Final Earth Day Tribute

No one can speak more eloquently for our planet earth than the American Indian, who worships it as a way of life:

*"Think not forever of yourselves,
O Chiefs,
Nor of your own generation.
Think of continuing generations of our families,
think of our grandchildren and of those yet unborn, whose faces are coming from beneath the ground."*

Peacemaker, founder of the Iroquois Confederacy circa 1000 A.D.

"How can you buy or sell the sky — the warmth of the land.

The idea is strange to us.

Yet we do not own the freshness of the air or the sparkle of the water.

How can you buy them from us?

Every part of this earth is sacred to my people.

There is no quiet place in the white man's cities.

No place to hear the leaves of spring or the rustle of insect wings...

The whites too, shall pass — perhaps sooner than other tribes.

Continue to contaminate your bed and one night suffocate in your own wastes.

When the buffalo are all slaughtered, the wild horses all tamed, the secret corners of the forest heavy with the scent of many men and the view of the ripe hills blotted by talking wires, where is the thicket? Gone. Where is the eagle? Gone. And what is it to say goodbye to the swift and the hunt, the end of living and the beginning of survival.

President Franklin Pierce — 1855

This "archaeologically unique" parcel of land, which has been preserved as open space for nearly 10,000 years, is being denuded and plowed under as you read this page. Wild life is being pushed beyond the boundaries of what has long been their safe haven. The balance of nature is being destroyed, and along with it, all the interdependent weavings of life — extending as far as the short-sighted profiteers who are destroying life on their own planet.

City Seal Has Interesting Background

Although conflicting reports surround the history of the seal of the City of New Orleans, it is generally agreed that this familiar bit of municipal artwork dates back to February 17, 1805.

At that time, the legislative council of the Territory of Orleans authorized the mayor of New Orleans to procure and use a seal on all official acts and documents. After the city was divided into three separate municipalities in 1836, each subdivision adopted a seal of its own. One point generally agreed upon is that the seal in use today was adopted with the reunion of the municipalities in 1852.

According to records in the City Hall Archives, official documents show that Mayor A. D. Crossman of New Orleans in June of 1852 was authorized by the Council to order a City seal which was engraved and printed for the sum of $16.

In 1871, a die of the seal adopted in 1852 was approved by Mayor J. R. Conway and was cast for the sum of $60. In 1873, an exact reproduction of the seal was entered according to an act of Congress.

Although records conflict insofar as the symbolic meaning of the figures on the seal, it is generally agreed that there is just one meaning of the stars which surround the figures. The twelve stars in the outer circle on top of the seal and the one star in the center represent the thirteen original states admitted to the Union; the twelve stars in the inner circle represent the twelve states admitted to the Union from 1791 to 1836; and the three stars on each side of the seal represent the six states admitted to the Union from 1837 to 1850.

The city seal, in much its present design, dates from February 17, 1805, at which time the Legislative Council of the Territory of Orleans authorized the Mayor of New Orleans to procure and use a seal on all official acts and documents. Although a complete and official description of the seal and an explanation of its symbolism are lacking, the "New Orleans City Guide", 1938, offers the following explanation: "Below and partly within the semicircular inscription 'City of New Orleans' an Indian brace and maiden stand on each side of the shield, upon which a recumbent nude figure is shown saluting the sun rising above mountains and sea. Above the shield are twenty-five circularly grouped stars, and below, an alligator."

Legend has it that the two main figures in the seal are two Indians, male and female, representing the first inhabitants of New Orleans. In the shield in the center of the seal are represented three wigwams, while on the top of the wigwams the sun's rays are shown, representing the warm climate of Louisiana and its radiant sun. Between the two wigwams, Father Mississippi is allegorically represented by Neptune, the mythological god of the waters and the sea. However, it is here in legend that the records differ. The New Orleans City Guide researchers do not identify the recumbent nude figure as Father Mississippi, but rather leave that figure unidentified. The alligator at the bottom of the seal represents the typical New Orleans marshes and swampland which is the natural habitat of these saurians.

Latest official records concerning the City seal in the City Archives are dated 1929, the year that the huge stage curtain for the Municipal Auditorium was purchased. On the face of this curtain is embroidered an enlargement of the seal of the City of New Orleans and was sold to the municipal government by the Chicago Civic Opera Shops and Studios.

The seal that has embellished city documents for over a century is noted but briefly in Book 130 of the minutes of the New Orleans city council:

"Paid John Douglas, 17 St. Charles Street, for engraving die and printing of seal, according to the ordinance of June 26, 1852 - $16."

provided glimpses of a mysterious world enhanced by prayers, incense, holy water and promises.

Marie eventually died and a copy of her death certificate is carefully displayed in one of the Voodoo parlors. "Very authentic," patrons are told.

Meanwhile Cemetery Tours, visits to the city's above-ground (the city actually lies below river level and huge dikes hold its waters in check) Haunted History walking tours, and even a Vampire Tour can give a special aura to New Orleans sightseeing. And build even more support for Voodoo, or at least a look-see. Even the Tourism Office now acknowledges the presence of non-standard sightseeing. For those who like a bit of fun mixed in with art galleries, historic sites, fancy restaurants and even the new cooking classes that have sprung up in recent years, Voodoo parlors are worth exploring.

Sidney Smith, a licensed tour guide who has developed the city's unique Haunted History Tours, says he believes NO is the most haunted city in North America. His trips run about 2 1/2 hours and claims they are not "like a five mile hike it's more of a stroll with many, many stops. Latest of his offerings, a Haunted Swamp Tour which could be something else again.

What about the LI connection? East Hampton's Town Crier, Hugh King, has for years been conducting walking tours, in early East Hampton costume, along Main Street. In addition to Home, Sweet Home, Clinton Academy, Guild Hall and the Mulford Farm he does a superb tour of the South End Cemetery with all the low-down on some of the early internees. No Voodoo as such, but plenty of inside stuff that rarely manages to get into history books. See if he is booked for Halloween 2000? For something along the same order, try Salem, Mass.

WHEN IN NEW YORK

Are you contemplating a move to New York City in the near future? Perhaps you will be graduating from college this spring and want your first job to be in the city. Before you begin apartment hunting, in this tight real estate market, the following tips may be helpful.

When our daughter, graduated she was offered an internship position, working in the city, so began looking for a place to live near her new job. The first thing she started to do was "network", asking friends she knew who lived in the city if they were looking for a roommate. Or, maybe her friends knew of someone looking for a roommate to replace one moving away. At her entry-level salary, there would be no way she could live alone and afford the high prices of rent in New York.

One day while watching the evening news, we saw an interesting segment about how to find inexpensive apartments in New York City. The reporter interviewed a Paulette Demeres, Vice President of the Corcoran Group, in the city. Demeres shared her expertise, gave tips for the novice apartment hunter and the segment showed viewers what some city apartments could look like. Combining the pointers from this program, along with advice from friends who live in the city, our daughter was ready to investigate her options. She definitely knew she needed a roommate, to help with expenses. However, this would mean finding a place that is convenient for both parties to travel to work and to find someone compatible, hopefully already in her large circle of friends.

BE READY!

As basic as it may sound, the key rule when apartment hunting is to be ready with money on hand to put down on the day you find what you are looking for. Also be ready when the call comes to look at an apartment and be flexible for your move in date. City apartments go quickly. Once you have found a place you want, make sure you have your check ready, with money in the account to back it up. You will need the first month's rent, security deposit, application fees and brokerage fees. Certified checks are a must. Brokers are not interested in waiting a week or more until you transfer funds or raise the amount needed for your deposit.

Using a broker is the common method of finding an apartment in the city. Long gone are the days when you went door to door and asked the superintendent if there are any apartments available. Brokers now handle these affairs and there is a considerable commission involved for their services. Sometimes the fee can be as much as fifteen percent of a year's rent. If you look in the newspapers for an apartment, there is still usually a fee involved for the management company that is handling the advertisement. Either way, you will end up paying a fee.

BE FLEXIBLE

Perhaps you have a certain location in mind for your first apartment. Safety is always the first consideration, of course. However, you may have to widen your search area to two or three districts. This will make it easier for you to find something, if you are not "set in stone" about where you want to live. Naturally, you will have to check on transportation routes, but the city system makes it easy to get anywhere, from practically any point.

Before you start looking with your broker and have started your telephone dialogue, make sure you know the terminology of apartment hunting. A studio is usually a one or two room apartment, where the living room and bedroom is combined. The kitchen may be separate or sometimes a converted closet, just large enough to hold the appliances and sink. A junior apartment has a small alcove off the living room that can be converted into a small bedroom or used as a dining area. A convertible apartment has a larger alcove off the living room, which can be made into another bedroom or used as a dining area.

Now that you have the apartment wording down pat, you'll have to know what type of building you want to live in. Apartments with a doorman are always higher in rent than those without.

Then there is the charm of the prewar buildings, built late 1800's to 1930's. Common features here are high ceilings, hardwood floors, arched doorways or fireplaces. The exterior and interior offer architectural details to it. Unlike earlier models, the post war buildings offer cheaper rent. They were built from the 1940's through the 1970's, and usually have red, brown or white brick exteriors. Laundry facilities are usually in the basement. In the higher rent range there are luxury accommodations in brownstones, townhouse or mansion settings, none of which are in the price range of a starting salary.

FINANCES

Once you have found the apartment you want and in the right location, now you will find if you will be approved. What type of credit check is needed? Most landlords want tenants with a guaranteed income, at least forty to fifty times the amount of the monthly rent. Credentials and background checks may be more rigid for persons without a rental history. The names, phone numbers and addresses of your employer, bankers, accountant, last landlord and guarantor are required. The landlords may request copies of your tax returns, pay stubs or even letters of reference. Cooperative buildings are particularly demanding in this respect. If you are approved, the landlord may still require a "lease guarantor" as a co-signer. This would preferably be a family member that lives and owns property in New York, New Jersey or Connecticut. Paperwork to document this may be necessary and therefore you may want to ask a family member in advance if they would be willing to be a co-signer on your lease.

To expedite the signing of your new lease, make sure you have all the papers ready that are required. Personal identification in the form of a passport or driver's license may be requested. If two or more persons are sharing the apartment, all of the renters will be required to sign the lease agreement and supply the items mentioned above. When working with a broker, his or her assistance is invaluable in sorting out the necessary paperwork needed to complete your transactions.

Pay close attention to details and do your homework. Your first experience in renting an apartment in Manhattan will be a positive one if you take your time to learn how it is done.

"WATER AND LIGHT" AT GAYLE WILLSON GALLERY

It wasn't exactly Sunday in the Park With George this past weekend. But close enough. How about simply, Sunday in Southampton With Art: stops at Gayle Willson Gallery, the Parrish Art Museum and a poetry reading at the Cooper House.

"Water and Light" is a most appropriate title for Gayle Willson's show, considering the fact that April is the perfect time to plant and thus the need for water and light. Of course, all life demands water and light to survive, these two factors labeled "physiological needs" by scientists.

The exhibiting artists employ these life-giving elements in diverse ways. Both Siv Cedering and Hans Van de Bovenkamp create sculpture/fountains where the stainless steel material reflects light as it also serves as a container for flowing water. What's interesting is the varied configurations that Ms. Cedering's sculptures take: from those based on curvature and flexion, resembling human female figures, to geometric shapes in her fountain, "Water Finds Its Own Level."

A piece displayed in the window is purposefully square, two tablets inscribed with Ms. Cedering's poetry. (Combining both visual and literary arts seems appropriate, too.) But the most fascinating aspect is the way the tablets, despite their square-shaped "perfection," are placed off-balance, one on top of another. There's a dash of irony here in a piece devoted to "harmonious" love and romance.

Besides stainless steel, Mr. Van de Bovenkamp works in copper as well; these examples feature forms that seem misshapen, one rock formation perched on top of another one. It's curious to note that his and Ms. Cedering's window piece are similar in their oblique arrangements.

Siv Cedering's Fountain

Off-centered shapes, light and water also play a salient part in various hand-blown pieces by Adam Aaronson. Both the properties of glass and silver leaf bring a special illumination to the artist's endeavors; the shapes (particularly the candles) are charming in their asymmetrical configurations.

Susan Newmark's arresting monoprints and paste paper series also convey the reflective quality of light created by her found objects. The beach landscape conjures up images of water, if not directly, at least suggestively. Meri Bourgard's landscapes, particularly her "Sunrise, Southampton," ties this exhibit's theme together, with not only the literal depiction of light and water, but with the idea of life in the rising sun.

"Water and Light" will be on view at Southampton's Gayle Willson Gallery until May 22.

HONORING THE ARTIST: CHARLES WALLER

Take a glance if you will at this week's photograph of cover artist, Charles Waller. Notice anything different besides the impish grin on Mr. Waller's face? It's his parrot, Waldo, peering out from his pocket, a bird with a mission, no doubt, and an equally impervious demeanor.

Both owner and pet have a lot in common: Waldo knows no bounds as he accompanies Mr. Waller on his rounds, sitting astride the car's rear view mirror, going with him when he picks up clam shells from the nearby beach. Apparently, Mr. Waller knows no limits either, having lived in various parts of the world, but now happily settled in the Springs. His journeys are now mainly confined to one trip a year, most recently Santa Fe, and to flea markets around the country where no object escapes his scrutiny. He may be adding to his permanent pipe collection, for example, or more likely, to his "pile of junk" for his art.

Simply put, Mr. Waller is a fearless collector of many things: physical items and ideas/images alike. In New York, where he has a studio/loft in the meat-packing district, Mr. Waller practices his obsession. "I walk around different neighborhoods, picking up ideas, putting them in my head, perhaps to use some day," he explains.

A sense of place is also important to Mr. Waller, both in life and in art. His three-story loft seems unique not only with its two terraces and interior balcony but also with its abundance of local color (an area "where transvestites and hookers used to live," Mr. Waller notes matter-of-factly).

Mr. Waller's penchant for whimsy, found objects, and sense of place has paid off. He has won awards for his art work in The New York Times as an illustrator for columns dealing with such diverse topics as money, relationships and food. ("I would do as many as twenty drawings a week for The Times," he recalls.)

Most relevant, however, are the three awards that Mr. Waller has won for covers on Dan's Papers, receiving one for every cover he has illustrated. His first drawing is still a favorite: a Memorial Day design featuring a seascape painted on a child's jacket — complete with a seashell attached to the lapel.

This week's cover is just as creative and characteristic of Mr. Waller: a salty old sailor dog which Mr. Waller painted on antique ceiling tin from a 100-year-old restaurant. The life preserver comes from a friend's boat, the bottle bought at a flea market. In the dog's mouth is a clam shell — again, items which represent the artist's impishness, love of local color and unique, often antique, objects.

No wonder Mr. Waller's works evoke the word, "character." He is surrounded by so much character in real life as well — including his parrot, Waldo.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

Carrying on in fine tradition are Dan's Papers "Movies Made Here" Film Festival and April with its leaky promise of Spring "showers." The Festival is a great counter balance to the rainy weekends and the alternative of spending the old Pesetas shopping. You can drop in on Saturday at 3 p.m. to the Ross School library and sit in the comfy warm, dry screening room. And remember... it's a FREE GIFT (to borrow an advertising redundancy). So, drive to Route 114, go to 18 Goodfriend Drive and pop in. It will pep up your face and download your legs. After a stimulating rest stop... this week the film is Masquerade!... you can pick up where you left off, but, don't overwork the credit cards.

Masquerade is a romantic suspense thriller and kissy-kissy-poo film. The title Masquerade is another grammatical discrepancy because, though it covers veiled identities, it also (in more advertising jargon) lays bare wicked, wretched lives and naked tanned bodies. Looking very blush-plush, especially as displayed against the florid backgrounds of Southampton estates and lush John Barry music. Even Shelter Island looks kind of like Florida.

It's a splashy mix of swanky yacht racing and nasty poor-boy competitions to get the poor little rich girl and her liquid funds. It unzips passion and defrocks vul-

Masquerade (1985)

garities to clobber and distance itself from its relationship to the gentility of Alfred Hitchcock's 1941, SUSPICION, starring Cary Grant as the handsome lug who loves his wife but, oh, that dowry.

The 1985 Masquerade gives us the handsome, baby face Rob Lowe, looking premature as the most knowledgeable and best boating captain and lover on the east coast. Arriving in the Hamptons under the cloud of a shady past, seaman Lowe quickly has women going overboard for him. There's the yacht owner's wife who likes him buck-naked for her eyes only (and of course, the movie audience)). Kim Cantrell portrays her without flinching when using naughty words and therefore, can get things off her chest easily, especially articles of clothing. Many other women's eyes turn to Rob's butt, but he turns to the young orphan with millions and a greedy live-in stepfather, and a local policeman who's loved her for years. Meg Tilley is the love starved young lady and is tearfully spunky and believable.

From this point on the movie has more twists than a raspberry Twizzler and can get stretched even thinner. But, cloyingly sweet, thin or twisting itself into self-demolishing turns, it does take hold of you and push you into many surprises, what, with yachting, talk of faulty propane hoses, sex, terms of the will spelled out, sex, evil conniving (in Amagansett's Lobster Roll "Lunch" diner, yet!), more sex, murder, marriage, suicide?, a red Ferrari, and so on.

The director, Bob Swain, and screenwriter Dick Wolf, were not much interested in the psychological character probing that gave depth to Hitchcock's glossy pictures. Masquerade is polished but not reflective. Even the Hamptons look too fingerprintless. Pretty polishing dulls the sharp jaggedness that this kind of movie should have. For instance, John Barry's opulent score just doesn't have the edge that Bernard Hermann's disturbing music gave to Hitchcock's films.

Naturally, Masquerade is rated R. You know this wild and woolly Hollywood crowd. The cheeky entertainment starts when? Promptly at 3 p.m. We'll be there again, and maybe a guest, to discuss the movie.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey who hosts with him the Dan's Papers "They Made the Film Here" Film Festival playing right now at the Ross School in East Hampton.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Salads are probably the best antidote to the heavy feasting of the recent holidays of Easter and Passover. Basically there are two kinds of salad: the simple salad and the composed salad. A simple salad is generally thought of as mixed greens with perhaps deliciously ripe tomatoes (in season of course) with some herbs and everything tossed together. That appears simple enough, yet there is an art to an appropriate blending of greens as well as balancing the components of the salad and its dressing.

Think about how your salad will look as well as taste. Consider the colors, textures and the mix of greens so they complement each other. Long before mesclun became a household word, I taught my students to mix an invigorating medley of radicchio, Belgian endive, arugula or fresh basil in season and simply dress with a fruity extra-virgin olive oil and a pure red wine vinegar.

In contrast to a simple salad, a composed salad is arranged and served without the ingredients being mixed. It can consist of cooked or raw vegetables or leafy greens with cooked fish or meat and even a colorful fruit salad such as papaya slices on fresh, puffy leaves of spinach with a garnish of goat cheese and candied walnuts. How a composed salad is arranged on a plate or platter is strictly a matter of taste and your own artistic flair. When preparing such a salad in cooking class, I tell my students "It's time to play." Happily there are no rules or boundaries here.

RADICCHIO, ARUGULA AND ENDIVE SALAD

Long before mesclun became a household word, I taught my students to mix this invigorating medley of greens, simply dressed with a fruity extra-virgin olive oil and a pure red wine vinegar. When preparing a basic vinaigrette, proportions are approximately 3 parts oil to 1 part vinegar.
Serves 4-6

- 1 large head radicchio
- 1-2 bunches arugula
- 1-2 heads endive
- 2 shallots, finely chopped
- 1-2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
- 1 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt

Freshly ground pepper to taste
3-6 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1. Unfurl radicchio leaves, discarding any bruised outer layers. Remove and discard core. Cut off and discard heavy arugula stems. Wash greens separately in a salad spinner and spin-dry. Wrap in paper towels to absorb excess moisture. Roll up and secure in zip-lock bags. Refrigerate until ready to use. For the salad I cut the endive crosswise into rings but do not wash, dry and cut until ready to toss with the greens.

2. Prepare dressing: Place chopped shallots in a mixing bowl. Measure out wine vinegar in a spoon with the salt and stir to mix in the bowl of the spoon with a fork. Mix with the shallots and season with freshly ground pepper. Gradually whisk in the olive oil until mixture is homogenous. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary.

3. Bring the greens to room temperature if refrigerated. Put them in a salad bowl and cut in the rings of endive. Pour the dressing over the greens and toss with abandon. Serve at once.

COMPOSED SHRIMP AND FENNEL SALAD WITH WARM VINAIGRETTE

Fennel, often referred to as anise, has no relation to the herb anise. It is much lighter in taste and becomes even more delicate when cooked.
Serves 4-6

- 1 pound large shrimp, 22-25 count
- 2 large bulbs fennel
- 1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1 1/2 teaspoons grainy Dijon mustard
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
- 6-8 cups assorted greens, Boston, bibb, red leaf or watercress, washed and spin-dried
- Dill sprigs for garnish (optional)

1. Shell shrimp and with a paring knife cut along the curve of the back to remove intestinal vein. Rinse and pat dry with paper towels.

2. Cut off and discard feathery stems of fennel. Remove and discard any bruised outer layer. Rinse and pat dry with paper towels. Thinly slice bulb vertically, removing heavy core. Cut slices into matchsticks and set aside.

3. In a large skillet, heat 2 tablespoons oil over medium heat, put in the shrimp and stir-saute for 1 minute. Move shrimp to the side of the skillet and put in the fennel. Cook, stirring the fennel about 2 minutes. Season with salt and pepper to taste then stir the shrimp and fennel together to cook another minute or so until shrimp are firm, pink and opaque.

4. Arrange greens on 6-8 plates and divide shrimp and fennel equally over the greens.

5. In same skillet the shrimp and fennel cooked in, add remaining oil. When warm, put in the garlic and saute quickly not allowing the garlic to brown. Add mustard and stir to mix. Stir in the vinegar and bring to the edge of a boil. Taste for seasoning then drizzle the warm vinaigrette over the shrimp and fennel. Garnish with dill sprigs if desired and serve at once.

Millennium Oatmeal Cookie Wins $10,000

Millennium Mocha Rocky Road Oatmeal Cookies won the $10,000 Grand Prize and the designation "Oatmeal Cookie of the New Millennium" in the 10th annual Quaker Oatmeal "Bake It Better With Oats" Recipe Contest. Julie Veith of Wichita, Kan., a first-time contestant, scratch baker and cookie lover, entered her recipe in the "Cookies, Cookies, Cookies" category.

The millennium cookie features classic flavors and captures the personal indulgence trend that will bridge the end of the 20th century and the beginning of the 21st. Rich chocolate, crunchy toasted walnuts, and soft marshmallow punctuate each bite of these comfy, chewy-crisp oatmeal cookies. Subtle coffee overtones keep them from being overly sweet, and they're equally delicious with a glass of milk or a cup of java.

Veith plans to use her $10,000 prize for a few home improvements and a dream vacation to Colorado with her husband and two oatmeal cookie-loving sons.

Millennium Mocha Rocky Road Oatmeal Cookies

Serves about 3 dozen

1 cup (2 sticks) butter, softened

1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1 tablespoon instant coffee granules
1 tablespoon hot water
1-3/4 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
2-1/2 cups Quaker oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
1-1/2 cups semisweet chocolate chips
1-1/2 cups coarsely chopped toasted walnuts
1-1/2 cups miniature marshmallows
Note: For old fashioned oats, add 2 tablespoons additional flour.

1. Heat oven to 350°F. Spray cookie sheets with cooking spray. In large bowl, beat butter and sugars with electric mixer until creamy.

2. Add eggs and vanilla; beat well. Dissolve coffee granules in hot water.

3. Add to butter mixture; mix well. Add combined flour, baking soda and salt; mix well. Stir in oats, chocolate chips and walnuts.

4. To shape cookies, flatten 1 heaping tablespoon of dough in palm of hand. Arrange 4 marshmallows in center; wrap dough around marshmallows to cover completely.

5. Repeat with remaining dough and marshmallows. Space cookies 2 inches apart on cookie sheets.

6. Bake 10 to 12 minutes or until edges are golden brown. (Do not overbake; centers of cookies should be soft.)

7. Let stand 2 minutes on cookie sheets; remove to wire racks. Cool completely. Store tightly covered.

Cook Up Some Happiness

Whether it's an ordinary weeknight or friends are stopping by, creating the delicious taste of a real home-cooked meal and having some fun while cooking that dinner may be easier than you think.

Thanks to new boxed dinners, it is possible to make a traditional oven-baked dinner any night of the week with only five minutes of preparation and thirty minutes in the oven. Making dinner can be as simple as adding chicken.

These great new products offer everything needed for dinner right in the box—stuffing or rice, seasonings, sauce and topping—just add fresh, uncooked chicken.

There are six chicken bake choices from Stove Top Oven Classics. They include the taste-tempting flavors of Traditional Roast, Herb & Garlic, Homestyle Barbecue, Cheesy, Honey Mustard and Lemon.

To make this delectable dish, preheat the oven to 375°F, cut butter or margarine into slices and place in a 13 x 9-inch baking dish. Next, add hot tap water, stir in the rice or stuffing packet and the seasoning packet. Place four or five boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (1 to 1 1/4 lb.) on top and then drizzle the sauce over the chicken. Finish off with a sprinkle of crumb topping and it's ready for the oven. Thirty minutes later when the house is filled with the mouth-watering aroma of a traditional home-cooked dinner, take it out of the oven.

The six-serving, dinner-time stand-out is made in one baking dish, making after-dinner clean up very easy.

Because you use boneless, skinless, chicken breast halves, there's no messy cutting or chopping. Unlike "skillet dinners" that require constant attention, after this dinner is popped in the oven, there's thirty minutes for "never-enough-time" fun activities. Here are five ways to get things cooking while dinner's in the oven:

- Jam-A-Rama. Turn on the stereo and get everyone singing along. Music is a great way for everyone to unwind.

- Sit Up! Step on the treadmill and pop in that exercise video. Start stretching. You don't need a marathon workout to start looking and feeling better.

- Take On The Clutter. Straighten the area of your home that bothers you the second you walk in. Enlist the kids and make it a family project.

- Call a Friend. When was the last time you called an old friend just to say hello? Today, take thirty minutes to catch up. You'll be surprised how good it feels just to laugh with a buddy.

- Seize the day. Relax, put your feet up for thirty minutes, close your eyes and enjoy the wonderful smell of your own home cooking. It's a tranquil end to a busy day and a wonderful start to the evening.

The new Stove Top Oven Classics can make dinner time easier and more fun. This mealtime solution makes delicious dinners with Sunday taste, Tuesday effort, any day of the week.

Interior & EXTERIORS

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

I've never seen a yard without space for a kitchen garden. Yet, next to lack of time, the reason most often given for not having a kitchen garden is lack of space.

Yet, you can more than double or triple the effective area of a small kitchen garden simply by putting a fence around it. And since the outside of the fence can ordinarily be used as well as the inside, you can add that much more to your growing area. A fence properly used can convert a small area into a kitchen garden many times as large as the base it occupies. The smaller the base, the greater the effect. This is worth emphasizing, for it is what makes it possible to locate most kitchen gardens near the kitchen.

Besides the crops that climb naturally (pole beans, peas, cucumbers, and so on), your fence should support squash, pumpkins, melons, tomato plants, and even potato vines, all of which may be yield to it as they grow, using strips of soft cloth for this purpose, as well as for slings to keep heavy fruit from dropping and pulling down their vines.

Note: careful spacing of seeds and plants. Contrary to popular belief, it is not true that highest yields are obtainable by wide spacing in poor soil and close spacing in rich. Since plants grow to smaller size in poorer soil, they need less room than in richer. At the same time, even in the richest of organic soils, the largest total yields do not require merely the largest individual plants, but the best combination of size and number. A single bean plant, for example, yields five pounds of snap beans if allowed all the space it could use. But if the same space would accommodate two plants yielding three pounds each, your returns per square foot would be increased by the closer planting. However, four plants instead of two might well be so crowded as to cut the yield to a pound a piece or less. In other words, a little experimenting is needed to determine the best spacing in your own garden, which may be done by trying a few different spacings of the same crop in different parts of the same row.

Note: Staggering your plants in adjacent rows. This is another method of saving space that should be used more often than it is. If you plant on a slant from one row to the next, all your seeds in each row can be five inches from the nearest in the other, with your rows only four inches apart. Combine this fact with another to the effect that one inch saved in every five inches is equal to one foot in every five feet, and you can see that staggering your plants should add one or more whole rows or crops to those otherwise feasible in your kitchen garden.

Note: Planting in wide rows with narrow walk-ways. In many vegetable gardens half the space is occupied by nothing but wide avenues between narrow in order to allow room for farm machinery they employ, but just the opposite should be done in the kitchen garden. By making your rows a yard or more wide, and allowing a bare minimum of stepping room between them, you can grow far more in a given area than by following commercial practices. You can stagger plants in both directions within wide rows, either at planting time with large seeds or when thinning with carrots, beets, lettuce and so on. Such a wide row may consist of several

Stainless Steel: Use It Once, Use It Again

Consumers should learn more about recycling to guide them in their decision-making about which products to buy. Recycling is totally useless if consumers don't complete the circle.

Bright and shiny stainless steel is considered an environmentally friendly "green" material because it is 100 percent recyclable. Stainless steel sinks and counters, appliances, building materials, automotive exhaust systems, food processing equipment, and medical and dental instruments are just a few of the products that can be recycled continuously-more than eighty percent of new stainless steel is made of recycled stainless steel.

Did you know that every man, woman and child in the United States generates an average of four pounds of trash a day? And that more than seventy percent of this material is buried in landfills? Because it is 100 percent recyclable, stainless steel's contribution to America's need for more and more landfills is minimal.

Recycling is not the only way that the Specialty Steel Industry of North America, a trade association of companies that make stainless steel, is committed to the environment. The association also has developed criteria for its member companies to evaluate the environmental performance of stainless steel. These criteria include:

- A commitment to operating manufacturing facilities in compliance with federal, state and local environmental laws and regulations.
- Consideration of environmental impacts when evaluating new projects, technologies, and manufacturing processes.

Choosing stainless steel products for homes and businesses is one way consumers can join the environmental effort.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Well, the weather hasn't been exactly spring-like lately. Talk about April showers! But as you read this, I will be enjoying the beautiful tropical weather of the Virgin Islands with my family. I hope things warm up by the time I get back. In the meantime, I thought I'd bring you all up to date on some opportunities and events that are on the horizon.

On May 2nd, the Long Island Wine Council presents Windows on Long Island 2000. This annual event raises funds for a charity, and this year it will benefit Gildas Club New York City. Named for Gilda Radner, Gildas Club opened in 1995 as a place where people touched by any type of cancer and their family and friends can learn how to live with cancer, whatever the outcome. Windows on Long Island has always been a class act, with the participation of Long Island restaurants and wineries. Many of our members, as well as our LIFB staff, attend this elegant event each year, and I can tell you, it is something to behold. It truly is a celebration of the quality and diversity of Long Islands food and wine. You can wander from table to table, tasting a variety of mouth-watering dishes created by some of the best chefs. It is also your chance to taste the best wine from 22 of our award-winning wineries and vineyards all under one roof. And what a roof it is! Held at Windows on the World on the 106th floor of the World Trade Center, the view is magnificent! All this, and for a terrific cause. I definitely recommend checking it out. It is a hot ticket, so if its not sold out already, you may still be able to get reservations by calling 212-647-9700, ext. 247 right now! If not, you can call 631-369-5887 to get on the mailing list for next year.

At a more local venue, the Central Suffolk Hospitals Mothers Day Garden Festival returns on Friday, May 12th, from noon to 6pm and on Saturday, May 13th, from 9am to 5pm. Held right at the hospital, this event is always a big hit. Check it out, find a flowering treat for Mom, and support your community hospital in Riverhead!

The New York State Department of Agriculture &

Markets just announced a request for proposals for New York States Farmland Viability Program. The deadline for requests is May 31, 2000. Proposals should be those that intend to improve the profitability, efficiency and income of participating farms. $150,000 was appropriated for 1999-2000. You can obtain more information on eligibility and a copy of the Request for Proposals by calling Kim Blot at NYS Department of Ag & Markets at 518-457-7076.

Regular readers are well aware of Long Island Farm Bureau board member Jennifer Halseys historic win in Albany last year. She was the first Long Island grower to enter the Young Farmer & Rancher Achievement Award competition, and not only did she win, she was the first single female to win in the history of this State award! Well, the 2000 competition is under way, and the deadline for applications is June 1st. It is open to Farm Bureau members between the ages of 18 and 35 involved in production agriculture. This award recognizes members for achievement in their farming pursuits and participation/leadership within agriculture and their own community. Does this description fit you or someone you know? Then call Toni here in our office at 631-727-3777 for more information or an application. Oh, by the way - this years state winner will represent New York at the American Farm Bureau Federation Annual Convention in Orlando, FL, in January 2001. You could be enjoying Disney World in the middle of winter!!

Ductless Air Conditioning: What You Should Know

Fewer homeowners are clueless about ductless air conditioning systems because those who already have them installed are getting the word out how economical and efficient they can be.

They're called ductless because they use no ductwork or air distribution systems. Because of that there are few places where the systems cannot be installed. In addition to homes, the systems have been placed in small and large offices, shops, motels and hotels, schools and universities, computer rooms, banks, hospitals and labs.

Ductless systems are made up of four components: The condensing unit, located outside the building; the indoor unit or units which can be wall or ceiling mounted; thin refrigerant lines, which connect the outdoor unit to the indoor unit; and a wireless remote or wall monitor which controls the entire system.

According to the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute there are a number of benefits users get with a ductless system. These include:

- Easy installation, easy maintenance
- Quiet operation and heating, too
- Simple control
- Attractive and efficient design

An informative brochure is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-sized envelope to ARI-Ductless, 4301 N. Fairfax Dr., Suite 425, Arlington, VA 22203.

sections, each containing a different crop; and the row should be the widest that will enable you to reach the center easily from each side.

Note: How about growing more than one crop in the same area? Succession planting is a common way of saving space, and you can not only adopt it but also improve on it. In conventional succession planting, you merely plant a second crop where you have just harvested a first, as in following early peas with lettuce. This is an excellent practice, and it should be followed in all kitchen gardens. You can carry the idea further to advantage, however, by planting some crops before their predecessors have been harvested. Peas, for example, may be started along a fence when the soil is still too cold for beans. A week or more later, a parallel row of pole beans may be planted, with the seeds staggered to lie opposite the gaps between the growing peas. Both crops will then climb over the same fence area, the peas to be picked when the bean vines are not damp (to avoid blasting), and the beans to begin yielding shortly afterward for a longer period. Besides following peas with beans in this way, you may plant a row of sweet corn along each side of any row of early bush peas or snap beans. With the corn plants spaced two feet apart in the rows, you will have easy access to the other crops.

Note: How about combining thinning with your harvesting?

If you are careful to scatter your seeds evenly and thinly when planting such crops as beets, carrots or salad greens, you can avoid the common overcrowding that makes hand thinning necessary before the plants you pull are worth using. A few extra minutes given to careful planting will enable you to enjoy delicacies later on in the form of small leaves of salad greens, baby carrots and beet greens cooked with tiny beets attached to them.

To maximize returns from combined thinning and harvesting, you should proceed in a series of steps. Take the first when your thinnings are large enough to eat. Thin evenly over the whole crop, leaving the remaining plants closer together than they should be to reach maximum size. The second thinning harvest is due at any time you choose before growth has resulted in overcrowding, and thinning would injure the root systems of the plants you want to leave. A third thinning harvest may follow the second, but not necessarily. You simply thin harvest until any plants that you want to allow to develop to full size have room enough to do so. Since harvesting is more fun than thinning, we like to concentrate on the harvest aspect of the combined operation while doing the work.

Note: Spreading your crops around. Unless your kitchen garden is large enough to grow all the crops you want, it is usually best to concentrate in it those that you use most often. This, however, does not mean that no others can be grown. We have grown potatoes under hay in an iris bed. We have also grown large crops of sweet corn by merely pushing seed kernels into the soil in groups of four between our blueberry bushes. Pole beans on the back fence, a rhubarb plant on each side of an outside chimney, parsley in a flower bed, and tomato plants in a perennial garden are only a few of the unconventional arrangements.

And why not? Wild plants (weeds) thrive in all sorts of unlikely locations and there are few premises on which a little ingenuity will not discover suitable space. Flower pots, window boxes, tubs and barrels have even been employed by imaginative gardeners to overcome space limitations. We have tried to cover the principal ways of enlarging the effective areas of kitchen gardens. But we are sure that readers will be able to think of many specific applications of each kind that will be even more useful to them.

Keeping Your Home In Tip-Top Shape

Harsh weather can wear on your patience, car and home. Combat the effects by heeding a few hints from Dremel, manufacturer of the Professional High Speed Rotary Tool:

Home Maintenance:

•Don't let your heating and cooling money go out the window.

Reseal those windows instead. Remove window putty with a rotary tool and a high-speed cutter accessory, reinstall the windows and reseal with new putty.

•It can be a cool idea to add a grill to an existing heating duct.

Cut the properly measured space into the existing duct, smooth any rough edges, install the grill and you can get more heat on cold days.

•Precipitation can wreak havoc on your gutters over time.

Replace leaking gutter corners with new ones, attach with rivets and seal the joints to ensure that leaks are history.

Auto Upkeep:

•Here's a tip your car may get a charge out of: clean the battery from time to time to reduce corrosion and dirty contacts.

Remove the battery, clean off dirt and oxidation with baking soda and water, then clean the cable clamps until shiny. A rotary tool with a brass brush accessory can make the job easier.

•Bust the rust on your car with a rotary tool that features a grinding stone or wire brush accessory.

The new Dremel Professional High Speed Rotary Tool simplifies these projects and more with several enhanced technical features experienced tool users can appreciate.

Dremel's patented electronic controller maintains the user's desired speed level.

This "cruise control" can especially be important when working at low- and mid-speeds, when a slow down could result in burning, jagged edges, uneven cuts and other problems.

Another highlight is the LCD Readout. This feature lets users select a precise speed setting between 5,000 and 30,000 rpm, in 1,000 rpm increments.

The Professional Tool system is available in a variety of kits, retailing for approximately $99 to $119 with a five-year warranty.

The tool is available at most major home centers and hardware and hobby stores.

You can get great project ideas and tips and learn more about the Professional Tool and other Dremel products at www.dremel.com or by calling 1-800-437-3635.

Pass The Produce: Easy Tips To Help Mom

Ask a young child what his favorite vegetable is, and most likely, he'll answer French fries. And, his lunch box probably isn't filled with fruits and vegetables either. In fact, according to a study published in the Archives of Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine (Vol. 150, Jan 1996), only one in five children eat the five or more daily servings of fruits and vegetables recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

But it's not time to throw in the towel yet; the new year is a perfect time for families to make healthier choices, like more fruits and vegetables, a regular part of their lifestyle. To help moms, Ragú teamed up with health professionals to develop simple tips for incorporating fruits and vegetables into kids' meals.

Last year the USDA created the Food Guide Pyramid for Young Children (ages two to six), which is designed to make healthy eating more simple and realistic for parents and their kids. The foods featured in the Food Guide Pyramid for Young Children, which can be found at www.usda.gov, are the healthy foods children like to eat, as well as those foods they should be eating more often.

"Parents have hectic schedules, and they may think fruits and vegetables take too long to prepare," said

Jodie Shield, M.ED., R.D., a registered dietitian with extensive experience in family and children's nutrition. "However, using simple tips and the USDA Food Guide Pyramid as a resource, it can be easy for parents to serve up fruits and vegetables even young kids will want to eat."

"Working with health professionals, we want to show families that fruits and vegetables can be convenient and delicious," said John Caron, Senior Director, Marketing, Ragú. "In fact, many everyday foods that families love, like Ragú tomato-based pasta sauce, easily delivers a daily serving of vegetables."

Perhaps the most mystical and misunderstood concept in the study of the Martial Arts is the concept of Ki, the concentration and centering of balance. Movie goers cheer wildly as Bruce Lee and Jackie Chan mow down waves of aggressors with surgical strikes and acrobatic leaps that an Olympian would be hard pressed to duplicate. Of course, we adults, are aware of the cinematic trickery that makes such feats possible even for the uninitiated. But, for children, these kareteka are supermen, who can overwhelm even the most terrifying opponent with the touch of a finger or a well placed kick. Stand outside a theater after such a screening and watch the children 'Kiaa' and kick at imaginary enemies as they become their screen heroes. This emulation is the opening to the mystery of inner strength, some of these children will enter the "Dragon" and find that punches, kicks, and magical leaps are a minor manifestation of the magic of Ki or true inner strength.

Is Ki manifested only in the martial arts? No, we can find Ki in the Hindu firewalker, in The Phillipino, who hangs painlessly suspended from steel hooks that penetrate his body, in the men and women who participate in the ironman contests that push their physical bodies beyond all normal limits.

We can find Ki in Mother Theresa, Martin Luther King, and Stephen Hawking.

Ki is the oneness of mind and body that makes the most ordinary among us capable of super human feats of endurance and strength.

At some point in life all humans are faced with enormously stressful situations in which survival may totally depend on oneness and inner strength.

Tips For Preventing Tennis Injuries

Don't step out on the court too fast. Knees, tendons and joints, ankles, leg muscles, ligaments and the lower back are all targets for injury from playing sports such as tennis and basketball. Add fatigue and it's a recipe for a casualty. Moreover, young athletes, whose bones, muscles, tendons and ligaments are still growing, are even more susceptible to injury.

Here are a few injury prevention tips for tennis from the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons:

1. Warm up for five or ten minutes before playing. Warm-ups can be as simple as jogging around the court.

Stop when you begin to perspire.

2. Follow the warm up by stretching. This includes stretching the hamstring, shoulder, and lower back. After playing, cool down.

3. Intake fluids before playing to avoid cramps and stiffness.

4. Avoid playing on surfaces with no "give", such as cement, asphalt or synthetic courts. To prevent lower back injuries when playing tennis on hard surface courts, wear heel inserts to absorb the shock.

An outdoor court such as the Sport Court provides a cushioned surface that reduces physical trauma and leg and back fatigue for growing young athletes as well as seasoned veterans. Vertical, as well as a lateral energy is absorbed by the patented design surface and provides better traction than traditional sport surfaces. The court also drains surface and provides better traction than traditional sport surfaces.

The court also drains better, maintains its cosmetic look longer and is more durable than traditional courts. The Sports Court surface can be used for new installations or installed over a tennis or basketball court and allows for multi-purpose activities including roller hockey. The Sport Court Game Court is for those who wish to have a smaller court and is designed for short court tennis, basketball, volleyball, and other family activities.

For information and a demonstration on a Sport Court, visit the showroom in Southampton at 394 County Road 39, or the newest location in Farmingdale at 167 Broadhollow Road (Route 110) or call 631-287-9060 for an appointment.

POLICE BLOTTER

Richard Gardner, thirty-nine, of Hampton Bays, was napping against the rail road tracks east of Tiana Road around 3 a.m., when, surprisingly, a train passed and hit the commercial fisherman, according to police. Amazingly, his only injury was a fractured elbow said police. The engineer saw Gardner but was unable to stop the train in time to avoid the sleeping man, and could not swerve around him as trains run on rails, as we all know. Gardner was flown by medivac helicopter to Stony Brook Hospital for treatment.

A Southampton Village resident was at his North Main Street home when two alleged prostitutes knocked on his door. Since the man had not ordered any prostitutes, he sent them away and called the police. The two alleged prostitutes then found their alleged "john," and later so did Southampton Village Police.

Aleksander Rogoz, thirty, of North Main Street was arrested, as were Shanel Westmoreland, twenty-five, of Brooklyn, Myrna Capellan, twenty-four, also of Brooklyn and Jean Deller, the accused pimp. Rogoz was charged with patronizing a prostitute, a misdemeanor, he pled guilty and paid a $250 fine. Westmoreland and Capellan were charged with misdemeanor prostitution, drug possession and unlawful possession of Marijuana, a violation. Westmoreland pled guilty to prostitution and Capellan pled guilty to attempted prostitution. The drug charges were dismissed and the pair was sentenced to a year on probation. Deller was charged with promoting prostitution and drug possession.

Lasaad Fazzaa, thirty-three, of Water Mill was arrested for disorderly conduct in a case of street standing. Southampton Village Police found him allegedly standing in the middle of Jobs Lane at 2:47 a.m. obstructing traffic.

Sag Harbor Village Police arrested Joseph Comfort, forty-three, of Center Moriches on a warrant for petit larceny. Mr. Comfort was arraigned in Southampton Town Justice Court and released on his own recognizance. Comfort is now comfortably at home.

Allen Terrell Hopson, twenty-two, of Bidgehampton was arrested after being observed by town police operating a vehicle on private property without permission and without headlights on Huntington Crossway. When police approached Hopson, he allegedly ran, threw a beer bottle and shoved a police officer, knocking him to the ground according to Town Police. The officers said they had to use pepper spray to subdue Hopson. He was charged with driving while intoxicated, insufficient lights, no seat belt, second degree harassment, resisting arrest, trespassing, violating the open container law and finally, littering. Hopson was taken to Southampton Hospital for treatment, then downtown to Town Police Headquarters for booking.

A car with two-year-old twins left unattended and strapped into car seat was found in East Hampton. The kids were wearing winter coats and the outside temperature was sixty-two. The children's screams caught the attention of a passer-by who called police. The witness waited twenty minutes for the parents, then the officer waited another ten minutes before the parents returned. The Vermont couple claimed that their children were used to being left in the car. They were arrested for endangering the welfare of a minor and Child protective services in Vermont was contacted.

In Montauk, another child was found alone in a car. When a passer-by found and confronted the mother, the mother got very upset, not about neglecting her child, but at the other woman, telling her to mind her own business and threatening to shoot her. No charges were filed.

The New Moon Cafe in East Quogue was broken into and robbed last Saturday. The burglar stole $400 cash, $10 in change and a camera. The thief left an interesting calling card. He or she defecated on a towel and left it on the cash register. Police have no leads on the cash register crapper.

Dan's LETTERS

FORGOTTEN ANIMAL PEOPLE

Dear Dan,

I can not believe all the hubbub surrounding the Wildlife Rescue of the Hamptons. Has everyone forgotten the original and first rehabilitator on the east end? A few weeks ago the folks at Dan's Paper forgot to show up at a beautiful fundraiser "THE WILD BRUNCH" held at Bridges restaurant in Sag Harbor. This fundraiser benefitted a couple of local wildlife organizations on the east end including Kim Cannon's WILD ANIMAL REHABILITATION CENTER, INC. Kim Cannon's organization and a few other's have nothing to do with Wildlife Rescue of the Hamptons even though at the inception of WR of the H they were there to help them. Now they are being slapped in the face by the same.

It is such a shame. It's the animals that will be at a loss if people "wrongfully assume" that they are a part of WR of the H.

Did you know that Kim taught some of the people involved with Wildlife Rescue of the Hamptons how to deal with these sick and injured animals? Yes, she gives classes at the Cornell cooperative center. What a travesty it would be if people only supported the new chic hospital. Kim's very home has been a hospital for many years. She's given up her bed and coat off of her back for any animal that needed help at any hour of the night. I'm sure that if she had the time she too could do a gala the size of WR of the H but knowing her as I do, she finds her time and effort more valuable in treating the injured wildlife. Maybe you ought to interview Kim and learn the truth about how all of this is affecting the older established rehabilitators. In fact ask your reporter Jerry Cimisi if he'd like to come chat with her. Ask her about the enormous task that she's undertaken all of these years. Please open your eyes to these saints that seem to have been forgotten in a flash of celebrity and paparazzi. Look into your heart and honor these forgotten people like Kim and share what you can give to them too. Without Kim we would not have had the amount of fledgling rehabilitators we have out here. She has been an inspiration to so many people. I am honored to know such a giving dedicated woman.
